

Seminars offered on environment

Public school teachers will be given priority to enroll in two special seminars on environmental awareness offered at the University during spring term.

The first class will be April 3.

The courses are 'Environmental Awareness: A Kinship with Nature' (Architecture 407, CI 407G, Tuesday, 7 to 9:30 p.m., 252 Lawrence) and 'Environmental Perception and Response' (Architecture 407, CI 407G, Tuesday, 7 to 9:30 p.m., 254 Lawrence Hall).

Sandy Herbert will teach the first course, which will explore kinship with all other life and perceptions of that kinship as culturally determined.

Geoffrey Herbert will teach the course on environmental perception and response. This course will have the following objectives - to enable participants to become more familiar with energy and material flows in ecosystems, to discuss environment on many scales, to explore basic cultural assumptions which conflict with an ecological conscience, and to help participants gain a dynamic sense of the natural environment, man's awareness, and his institutions.

Each seminar is limited to 15 members, and instructor's consent is necessary before registration. The instructors may be contacted through the University's Environmental Studies Center, 686-5006, or at 344-8653, evenings.

'Guten Tag' evening class offered again

An evening course in beginning conversational German, 'Guten Tag,' will be offered again by the department of German at the University.

The course is for residents of the area and is given free of charge.

The class would be held on Wednesday evenings, starting April 4, from 7 to 9 p.m. in 177 Lawrence Hall.

Helmut Plant, associate professor of German who developed the German Language course, "Guten Tag," under a $19,000 grant from the Educational Coordinating Council, will teach the course.

The evening classes will differ from the Guten Tag daytime course. There will be no homework and the course will be based on a series of black and white sound motion pictures on language. In addition to the language film, a German feature film will be shown at each meeting.

To introduce the students to German writing, which is forbidden in the daytime conversation classes, Plant has selected five German silent film classics with subtitles in German. Most of the subtitles he will translate.

The first meeting of the evening 'Guten Tag' on April 4, will have as guest, director of the Goethe Institute, German cultural institute, in San Francisco, Dr. Eugen Vetter, who will welcome the students.

Gross says Eckankar informative and safe

The light is hu
The sound is hu
We open, open wide the door
To let the light hu
We open, open wide the door
To let the sound hu.

Eckankar, the ancient science of soul travel, was presented through music, film and a question and answer session in the EMU last Tuesday night.

The Dad's Room was full when the announcer sang the above verses with guitar accompaniment, encouraging the audience to chant and sing along.

After a few technical difficulties, a film got underway depicting a lecture given by the living Eck master, Sri Darwin Gross.

Gross described Eckankar as "how you, as an individual, can take a trip without the use of drugs. It is safe, harmless and very informative."

Gross said that sound and light are essential in Eckankar. Spiritual exercises done daily by Eckists consist of chanting one of many sounds, to ultimately reach the highest plane, called the soul-body, Gross said.

In this body, the Eckist is above time and space, above the lower, physical planes, Gross stated. When the Eckist reaches this state, he can travel outside his body, able to literally be omnipotent and omnipresent, according to Eckankar.

Gross said Eckankar means "all-inclusiveness with God," an individual process. "There is not temple or church, except the temple within man," Gross said. If you are happy with your present path, Gross said, stay there. Following two or three teachings at once is "like mixing gas and water. It will not work," Gross said.

Gross said that people from many other philosophies have come to Eck. "Whether they be Christian, Jew, Moslem or Hindu they have come to the end of their road," Gross said. They came to Eck to have their questions about the nature of life answered, Gross said.

The present-day movement of Eck claims a following of several million. A non-profit organization, Eck has a center in Eugene for those interested, at 1122 Alder St.

In assembling this 'best value' stereo system we left out something very important: $30.00!

Individually, each of the components pictured has created a new standard of sound-per-dollar stereo value. Together, these components produce an amount and quality of sound that would have cost at least five hundred dollars a year ago.

The Smaller Advent Loudspeakers are the only speakers costing less than the now-famous original Advent Loudspeakers which can reproduce the entire musical range. Most inexpensive speakers cannot produce the lowest octaves of music: the lowest strings of a double bass or electric bass guitar, the lowest pipes of a pipe organ. The Smaller Advent can.

The Marantz 2010 AM-FM stereo receiver has enough power to satisfy both you and the Advents. It produces 10 watts RMS per channel, across the entire musical range, at less than 0.5 per cent total distortion. (RMS is the most demanding and least flashy of the various power-rating systems.) The tuner sections will separate weaker stations on a crowded dial from their brawnier neighbors and receive them with an amazing fullness and clarity.

To match the quality and reliability that the 2010 and the Advents represent, we recommend the BSR 510X with a Shure M75E cartridge. The 510X has a heavy platter, a synchronous motor, a convenient cueing control and comes with a dustcover and base.

Come to Mac's Hi-Fi this week. You'll be surprised how much quality sound your four hundred dollars can buy.

System price: $419.00. If bought separately: $449.00.
