

Several faculty members receive new appointments

Seven University faculty members have been named to new appointments as department heads and directors in the College of Liberal Arts.

New to the campus among the appointees are Lilian Furst, director of the Graduate Program in Comparative Literature for 1973-74, and George Mills, director of the University's new Ethnic Studies Program.

Lilian Furst is a distinguished scholar in comparative literature from Manchester, England. She organized the Department of Comparative Literary Studies at Manchester University, where she has been on the faculty since 1966. At the University, she will also chair the Comparative Literature Committee.

Mills came to the University earlier this month. He comes from the Spokane public schools, where he taught mentally retarded children and was involved in Indian education programs for the past several years. He will administer the University's two new ethnic studies certificate program.

Daniel Goldrich, member of the University political science faculty since 1963, is new chairman of the department. He is a specialist in political development, both American and third world.

Fred Andrews is new chairman of the Mathematics Department. He joined the University faculty in 1959. For nine years, until September, 1969, he was director of the University's Statistical Laboratory and Computing Center. For two years he was an associate dean of the Graduate School.

Jack Sanders has been named chairman of the Department of Religious Studies. A member of the faculty since 1969, Sanders is a scholar of Biblical studies.

Richard Desroches has been appointed acting director of the Department of Romance Languages while Perry Powers is on sabbatical leave in Europe during 1973-74. Dr. Powers will be studying the contemporary theatre in Spain and Norway, primarily. Desroches, who came to the University in 1957, is a scholar of the 18th-century French novel.

Laurence Kittleman, Jr., associate professor of sedimentology in the Museum of Natural History and curator of geology for the Museum since 1963, has been named acting director of the Museum. David Cole, who has served as acting director for the past two years, will be on sabbatical leave during 1973-74 to continue research and writing on a ten-year archaeology project in northeastern Oregon.

EOS names men to fill appointments

Two appointments, in the University offices of Admissions and Student Financial Aid, have been made specifically to provide admissions, financial aid, and student employment services for low income, disadvantaged students who come under the aegis of Educational Opportunity Services (EOS), according to Dean Donald Rhoades of Student Administrative Services.

Robert Campillo, 35-year old Mexican-American, has been named Associate Director of Admissions and Financial Aid (including employment). Christopher Munoz, age 25, will become counselor in Admissions-Financial Aid. Munoz is also a Mexican-American.

Campillo, who has already arrived on the University campus, comes from California State College at Sonoma, where he has been an Admissions Counselor Intern while working on his master's degree. He received the degree in counseling this past June.

As an intern, Campillo was involved in community relations, academic counseling, financial aids, and placement.

In his position at Oregon, Campillo will be responsible for coordinating the recruitment process for ethnic minorities and disadvantaged white students. He will be responsible for packaging the financial aid and employment of these students and assisting them with their admission to the University.

Campillo is married and the father of three children.

Munoz has received an Associate of Arts degree from San Bernardino Valley College and a Bachelor of Arts degree from California State University at Fullerton.

From June, 1971 to January, 1972, Munoz was a financial aids counselor at the University of California at Irvine, and then was named Assistant Director of Financial Aids. In the latter position he has been responsible for the Health Profession Program for the College of Medicine, and for the administration of the financial assistance portion of the Educational Opportunity Program.

Campillo and Munoz will be administratively responsible to Admissions Director Vernon Barkhurst and Director of Financial Aid Walter Freauff.

To expedite the work of the two new EOS appointees, Emmett Williams, Assistant Director of Student Financial Aid, has been named general coordinator to serve in a liaison position between admissions, financial aid, and employment.

Two Law School students receive awards

Awards of $1000 and $250 were recently awarded to two University law students.

Matthew Chapman of Portland is the winner of the 1973-74 Paul Patterson Memorial Fellowship and Pamela Finley of Eugene, a third-year student at the University School of Law, has won first prize of $250 in the 1973 Nathan Burkan Memorial competition at the School.

The Paul Patterson Memorial Fellowship, of approximately $1000, is given annually to a student completing the second year at the University Law School who best exemplifies the qualities of integrity, leadership and dedication to public service which characterized the late Governor of Oregon, Paul Patterson.

This year's winner of the award, Chapman, graduated with a B.A. degree in economics in 1971 from the University of Portland, where he was valedictorian of his class, president of the student senate, and managing editor of the student newspaper. Chapman currently ranks first in his class at the Law School and is editor-in-chief of the University Law Review. He was a member of the School's moot court team during 1972-73.

The Nathan Burkan Memorial Competition, won by Finley, is sponsored by the American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers. It encourages law student writing and interest in the field of copyright law.

Her winning essay, "Parody, Piracy and Free Speech," analyzes the application of the law of copyright to the art of parody, which by its very nature involves a degree of copying or imitating of serious works for the purpose of adapting them to humorous treatment or to a ridiculous subject.

Finley notes that a good deal of parody material is developed as social criticism and thus there may be justification for giving this literary art form favored treatment, in order to protect the right of citizens to speak out on societal problems.

She is a graduate of the University of California at Berkeley.

Committee to picket in Thien's support

Ngo Chi Thien, the Vietnamese x-ray technician faced with deportation to Saigon, has an appeal today at the Immigration Appeals Court in Washington D.C. In his support, the Ngo Chi Thien Support Committee will picket the corner of 7th and Oak, between 4 and 5:30 p.m. Everyone interested in supporting Thien's right to go to the Provisional Revolutionary Government of South Vietnam, is urged to come, or contact the Ngo Chi Thien Support Committee through Pauline Lasse, 747-0654.

Geology booklets available for 25 cents

The booklets by University geologist Ernest Lund about the geology of the Oregon coast are 25 cents each, rather than 10 cents, the price announced in an earlier news story. Copies of the booklets, which are written for the layman, may be obtained by writing "The Ore Bin," 1069 State Office Building, Portland, Oregon, 97201. They are also available at the University Bookstore. The four titles are "Oregon Coastal Dunes between Coos Bay and Sea Lion Point," "Coastal Landforms between Florence and Yachats," "Coastal Landforms between Yachats and Newport," and "Coastal Landforms between Tillamook Bay and the Columbia River."

Saturday Market Committee meeting set

There will be a general meeting of the Saturday Market at 7:30 p.m. tonight at Harris Hall. The main topic will be methods of limiting the size of the Market. Also on the agenda will be discussion of guidelines for food vendors. All interested persons are welcome.

Some registered voters to get new cards

Registered voters with addresses on Eugene Route 1 through 8 will be receiving new precinct memorandum cards this week from the Lane County Elections Department. The cards will show the new route and box numbers assigned by the post office in a recent change.

Law requires that when individuals change their address they must re-register. Since the change is being made by the post office, the County Elections Department has initiated the change of records so that these residents need not re-register unless the address on the new precinct memorandum card is incorrect. New cards will be going out to 1086 registered voters. Any person who receives a card bearing an address that does not match his new route and box number should either call 342-1311, Ext. 217, or come to the Elections Department on the first floor of the Courthouse, to have a correction made.
