

Leo argues for free game

Greg Leo calls the varsity intersquad basketball game a "rip-off" and thinks the game ought to be free to all students who care to come.

Bill Landers says the game is a legitimate way to raise funds for a team trip to Australia, but adds a free game for students could be arranged.

The ASUO president and the assistant athletic director will probably meet in the middle with the planned intersquad game coming off as scheduled Nov. 20 and a possible game-style scrimmage in the works for later in the month.

"The people playing basketball are our peers," Leo said. "It's not like they're professionals, contrary to appearances. We (the students) should be able to have access to our own peers free at least once a year."

Leo said he had gone to the athletic department and requested they make the game free.

"They're going to incur the wrath of a lot of students through this," Leo said. "They might have all the cards now, but when the time comes in future years for alumni donations..."

Leo proposed a free intersquad scrimmage to be played later in the month. Landers said it might be possible.

"I concede the possibilities of having a strictly student free scrimmage," Landers said. "It hinges on whether Dick Harter wants to play it or not—he's fairly independent."

"If Leo would come to us with a proposal, I'm sure we could accommodate the students."

Leo proposed that for future fund raisers, the team travel to Portland for the money game and play a free game for the students.

He also announced the formation of a "hot list" for stolen or lost athletic tickets. Students whose tickets are lost or stolen are requested to list their name and card number, if possible, with the ASUO. Leo said any card found would be returned.

IFC conflict ends

"executive was not granted absolute control over the ASUO and should therefore exercise the powers granted in the ASUO Constitution in conjunction with the other branches of the ASUO. It is only by this means that the ASUO can hope to be truly representative of the students which it serves."

ASUO President Greg Leo responded to the report stating, "The constitution committee did exactly what we wanted them to do. They clarified the respective roles of the executive and the IFC. Their decision is something we can live with."

Randy Shilts, chairer of the IFC, commenting on the report, told the Emerald, "Finally the ASUO executive is being told that he does not have absolute control over the ASUO. What we should have is representative government, not despotism."

State positions

Two run for OSPIRG board

Two members of OSPIRG's local board will be seeking positions on OSPIRG's state board in elections to be held Sunday at Oregon College of Education in Monmouth. Peter Glazen is a candidate for chairer of the state panel, and Steve Park is running for vice-chairer. Members of the local board discussed plans for attending the state board session at a regular meeting Thursday.

The board also discussed plans for local board elections, which must be held before the end of fall term. Board member Steve Park said he had discussed with ASUO officials the possibility of including the OSPIRG election on the ballot of a recall election if the latter proves necessary. Board chairer Dan Mulholland indicated that dates for filing by candidates for position on the OSPIRG board will be announced next week.

The balance of Thursday's meeting was devoted to progress reports on several projects currently underway by OSPIRG staffers. Topics included:

—a statewide study into the quality of meat found in supermarkets;

—an investigation into a proposal by the State Bureau of Land Management to build a road on the south side of the North Umpqua River. OSPIRG is questioning the need for such a road since one already exists on the river's north side;

—the Wards' re-zoning issue;

—several projects relating to the energy situation.

The board also discussed briefly the desirability of hiring a staff member with a thorough scientific and technical background to spearhead the latter projects.

World's shortest CPA aptitude test.

Problems stimulate me.

Problems upset me.

If you want to earn a living in a field that constantly offers new and exciting perspectives—new problems to solve—consider the work of the CPA.

A CPA has to grasp the essentials of many different fields, and have the independence to form objective opinions about them.

He's more in demand than ever before, by corporations, non-profit agencies, government bodies at all levels.

Why? Because the increasing complexity of business requires new concepts of fact-gathering, problem-solving, and communication of economic information.

The CPA, for example, is one of the leaders in planning new ways to use computer systems.

He might also be called upon to weigh the relative merits of social programs in terms of available resources, helping to shape an urban renewal program.

So if problems intrigue you, and if you have aptitude for concentrated, meticulous, creative thinking, you might make a good CPA—in a public accounting firm, in industry, education or government. At some point, you might even decide to form a firm of your own.

Talk with your faculty advisor. He can tell you about the courses that could lead toward a CPA certificate soon after graduation. Or you can do graduate work.

You can also learn about the work of a CPA in a booklet we'll be glad to send you. Drop a note or card to: OSCPA, Oregon Bank Building, Portland, Oregon 97204.
