

Gonzales cries foul about gay cut

Incidental Fee Committee (IFC) member Gloria Gonzalez has accused IFC chairer Terry Kay and member Peter Glazer of axing the Gay People's Alliance (GPA) budget in retaliation for a vote she made against salaries for IFC members.

The GPA budget had already been approved with Peter Glazer and Kay Hill supporting the allocation, Terry Kay abstaining, and Bill Dick opposed. Gonzalez was not present for the first IFC vote on GPA's budget at a meeting on May 11.

In last Friday's meeting Gonzalez, Hill, and Dick voted against salaries for the IFC. Hill explained after the meeting that she had felt it unfair to take salaries for IFC membership when directors of minority student unions were being denied salaries by the same IFC.

After the IFC salaries were voted down, Kay asked to reconsider the GPA budget.

"Peter (Glazer) and Terry (Kay) changed their votes and killed GPA's budget," Gonzalez said. "It was their way of getting back at me for voting down their salaries. They knew it was the one thing they could do to get me really mad."

Kay, however, has rejected Gonzalez's assertion as an "erroneous statement." He says that any budget was then open for reconsideration, and that his vote change on GPA reflected that he had changed his mind.

Whatzit does the job for the Emerald

Readers who aren't too blurry-eyed may have noticed something different about the type in Friday's Emerald.

Actually, this is a change of a change. May 2 the Emerald began using a new type-face but the computer that determines how to space-out each line of copy wasn't too sure how to handle it. However, Thursday the Emerald received a long-awaited-for whatzit that is supposed to help things out.

What do you think of the new type now? Do you find it easier-harder to read. Is it more-less visually appealing? Let us know.

Life-Long Learning sets final fete

"Older" students at the University will have their final meeting of the year today. It will be a brown bag lunch at the EMU from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The session is sponsored by the University Office of Life-Long Learning Services, a part of the Student Personnel Services.

All students who have either returned to the University after some years or who started their university work at an older age than the average student are invited.

Life-Long Learning was set up in the past two years to aid the "older" student in the initial registration process, orientation and other services which ensure a successful university career.

The room number for today's luncheon will be posted in the EMU lobby.

PL-3, KWAX join to broadcast concert

There will be a brief marriage between the School of Music and the division of broadcast services of the University tonight at 9 p.m. when the University Consort, directed by Harold Owen, will be presented in a halfhour concert live in stereo over KWAX-FM and on PL-3 television. It will be the first time such a transmission has been attempted. Viewers at home will enjoy hearing the special brand of music performed by the Consort in stereophonic sound while they get an unusual close-up view of the group on their television screens.

"IT'LL LOOK GOOD ON YOUR RESUME."

A lot of business career oriented students want to get experience before they graduate. Some of you are finding excellent part-time jobs or internships, and that's great. But these kinds of opportunities are limited.

For the rest--that is, those of you who are genuinely interested in getting practical experience before graduation--I want to point out that one of your best opportunities is right here in Allen Hall this summer, selling ads for the Daily Emerald.

Let me tell you what being an advertising rep for the Emerald involves. You'll not only be trying to get new accounts, but you'll be servicing existing ones. You'll get a chance to see if your creative ability really can sell products and services for local merchants.

In short, you will be an account executive, copywriter, and media salesperson all at once. Many accounts will expect you to be a sort of one-person agency for them. And if you work hard, chances are you may make as much money as you would in the cannery or the mill. And you might find it fun.

With their selling experience, Emerald ad reps have had little trouble finding jobs upon graduation. A lot of you have been asking where to get pre-graduation experience.

Now you know.

Applications now being taken for summer positions, rm. 301 Allen Hall or call 686-3713.
