Despite half Troy's stats Ducks unimpressed with USC

Nebraska could beat Southern Cal, the Trojans will have trouble disposing of California and the Bears' Chuck Muncie is a better runner than SC's much-talked-of Anthony Davis.

Such is the consensus of the Oregon football team following Saturday's 16-7 loss to the Trojans.

"No way they could beat Nebraska," said defensive end George Martin. "Cal, USC could go either way. USC's got a better line but Cal's got better backs."

"They (USC) rose to the occasion," said tailback Don Reynolds. "But, actually, I wasn't that impressed with them. They're a fundamentally sound football team and they're good, but not that good."

Ron Hunt, the big offensive tackle who spent his afternoon fending off — or trying to — SC's massive line, said the Trojans were "equal to Nebraska but Cal-USC is even."

"USC's not very enthusiastic," said linebacker Tom Yaru, who was credited with 11 unassisted tackles. "At least Cal had fun while they were beating us. USC seemed like they were just out there waiting for the pros. I'd like to see Cal beat 'em."

If the Duck players weren't awed by the Trojans as a team, they weren't exactly lavishing Anthony Davis with compliments either.

"They run a damn good sweep and Davis is really quick" said linebacker Derrel Mehl, in on 13 unassisted tackles. "But Muncie was harder to tackle. He's stronger and has better balance."

"Anthony Davis doesn't rate that high in my book," said Martin. "There's no comparison between him and Muncie, both as a player and as a person."

While the Ducks weren't overly impressed with Davis and the Trojans, one thing's for sure. It's nice to have A.D. & Co. for only one game a season.

EXACTLY.
