

Public presents various views to Energy Advisory Committee

The Governor's Energy Advisory Committee held a public hearing Tuesday night at the Eugene Hotel to give citizens a chance to express their views on Oregon's energy policy.

The committee was established by the 1973 legislature to draft a proposed long-range energy policy for Oregon and to recommend legislation on energy-related issues to the 1975 legislative session. The committee will include the public's ideas and opinions when it presents its findings to the legislature.

The hearing was presided over by John Reynolds, a professor of architecture at the University and a member of the Eugene Water and Electric Board. Reynolds first asked for general statements from the audience of approximately 50 persons.

George Adams, Eugene, stated that he thought the committee should stop wasting time on more energy studies. "The nation is over-run with studies now. What we need to do is start doing something about it."

Annabel Kitzhaber, representing the League of Women Voters of Central Lane County, said the league favors state support of mass transit, government funding of research of alternative energy supplies, and better enforcement of Oregon's 55-mile-per-hour speed limit.

Robert Gray, Eugene, felt that a way should be found to make solar heat installation more competitive with other energy sources. He suggested low-interest state loans for solar heat installations and the exemption of solar collection systems from the property tax.

The audience was asked twice for a show of hands to indicate its feelings. Most of those present favored progressive power rates (those who use less pay less). The audience was strongly against nuclear power as a solution to energy needs.

The committee members were asked what they felt are the state's top energy priorities. Matthew Gould, environmental control director for Georgia-Pacific Corporation, said there is "clearly a lack of adequate mechanization to coordinate the state's energy policies at present" and stressed the need for such a body. He said there will be several bills before the next legislative session to create a state energy policy organization.

Other suggestions brought up at the hearing were the conversion of animal wastes to methane gas and the taxing of vehicles by weight and horsepower.

Persons who wish to make comments but were unable to attend the meeting can send their comments to Frank Dillow in the Public Utility Commissioner's Office, Room 200, Public Service Building, Salem, Oregon 97310.

Portland Opera offers 'student rush' prices

"Student rush" prices will be offered for Portland Opera's production of Weber's "Der Freischutz," scheduled for 8 p.m. Saturday and Monday at 8 p.m. in the Portland Civic Auditorium.

A student with an authorized student body card may purchase a ticket in any price range for one-half the face value of the ticket — if he or she is at the auditorium box office after 7:30 p.m. on the night of one of the three performances — and if there are seats remaining for that night's performance. Best seats remain for the Monday performance.

"Der Freischutz" is Carl Maria von Weber's operatic version of a well-known Bohemian legend. The story is that of a huntsman who "sells his soul" to the devil in exchange for a chance at the position of head-forester and the hand of the woman he loves. Weber's music for "Der Freischutz" heralded the beginning of the Romantic era in German opera.

Inquiries about the "student rush" offer may be directed to the Portland Opera Association by calling 248-4741.
