U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz who headed the U.S. Delegation to the World Food Conference in Rome last November will discuss "The Right Kind of Food Aid" as he addresses the OSU World Population and Resources Program at Oregon State University at 7:30 p.m. Friday.

The talk in the Home Economics Auditorium will be broadcast "live" on radio station KOAC (550) and will include the question and answer session slated to follow.

The Secretary of the Agriculture was formerly Dean of the School of Agriculture at Purdue University and then Dean of Continuing Education and Vice President at the Purdue Research Foundation. He was nominated to the Cabinet and took office in 1971.

Books to sell? APO offers free listings

Alpha Phi Omega is again sponsoring a free Used Book Information Center today and Friday in the EMU from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. All students wishing to sell their used books should bring a list of these books to the lobby of the EMU. Title, author, class book was used for, and tentative asking price should be included. At the beginning of Spring term, these books will be on file and will be available outside the Bookstore. Service is free today and Friday, but 10 cents a book will be charged to register books at the beginning of Spring term. For more information, call Warren Tyler, 484-0257.

Students who listed their books with the service last term are still registered. If you had books file and did sell them, stop by the EMU and your card will be pulled.

Jazz groups to perform at Beall Hall

The University of Oregon School of Music will present an evening of Jazz in the Beall Concert Hall at 8 p.m. tonight. Featured will be the University Jazz-Lab Band and the Faculty Jazz Trio. The concert is open to the public with no admission charge.

The University Jazz-Lab Band, directed by Professor Charles Dowd, is a student ensemble dedicated to the performance of creative "big-band" jazz compositions of today. The Faculty Jazz Trio consists of Professors Charles Dowd, Edwin Coleman, and Edward Kammerer. Professor Harold Owen will be featured as guest performer with the trio. Owen is widely known for his innovative use of the Moog Synthesizer and other related electronic musical equipment.

The first half of the evening's program will feature the University Jazz-Lab Band. Following the intermission will be the Faculty Jazz Trio with guest performer Hal Owen.

The University Jazz-Lab Band returned this week from the Reno Jazz Festival where they were acknowledged as being one of the 10 best bands competing. The Reno Festival was attended by over 200 performing groups from throughout the country.

University law school applications up

Indicative of a questionable national trend, law school applications at Harvard University have dropped approximately 15 per cent from over 7,000 last year to an estimated 6,000 this year. At this University, however, law school applicants have increased by about 100 from last year's 1,200 but are still fewer than in 1972.

The 1972 number of applications reached 2,000 — a high peak for the University, reflecting a "surge of interest" in the law profession at that time, according to one law admissions office spokesperson.

Now, there is a surplus of lawyers in the field and a scarcity of jobs, especially in Oregon, according to Law School Administrative Officer Becky Anderson.

"The big rush toward law school is peaking out all over the nation," according to Harvard dean of admissions Russel Simpson, "because many law school graduates are having difficulties finding law related jobs."

Simpson speculated that Harvard's application drop may be at least partially due to a recent hike in the application fee, from $20 to $30. There has been no application fee hike here in the last three years when it was set at $30 by the Oregon State Board of Higher Education.

Only 750 students will be accepted into the Harvard Law School, meaning applicants have a 20 per cent chance of being admitted into the school.

At this University, the Law School has increased the number of admitted students from 150 each year to 175.

Weather Watch

To rain or not to rain, that is the question. Today will be partly cloudy with 70 per cent chance of late afternoon and evening showers. The high temperature is predicted to be 50-55 degrees with the low falling to 30-35.
