White-Water Week gets underway

A series of multimedia shows and workshops designated to introduce the beginner to the joys of river running highlight the Outdoor Program's third annual White-Water Week.

The event runs today through Friday.

Today's session includes the slide presentation, "Western Whitewater Rivers Show," to be shown at 8 p.m. in 150 Science. This is its premiere showing and features Eugene guitarists Craig Sorseth and Sean Foster. Also shown will be a slide show illustrating the 1974 Salmon River clean-up.

Thursday's session includes a white water equipment session. This again will begin at 8 p.m. in 150 Science. The Outdoor Program will display and discuss various white water equipment and crafts. Included in this session will be a movie of whitewater kayak racing and a slide show portraying 11 Eugene citizens who boated down the Colorado River.

Friday's session includes a barbecue beginning at 4 p.m. at Alton Baker Park. At 3:30 p.m., however, the Outdoor Program will provide rafts and grills to float down to Alton Baker Park. Meet at the footbridge. Interested individuals should also bring their own food and beverage.

The Outdoor Program is located in Room 23 in the EMU.

Canoe Shack now open during week

The canoes are now back during the week, too. The Canoe Shack, run by the University Recreation Center, is hoping that spring is here for good and hopefully will be open from 2 p.m. to dusk, Monday through Thursday, and from noon to dusk on Friday, Saturday and Sunday. However, the operation is still dependent on weather conditions.

The Canoe Shack is located on the Millrace off Franklin Boulevard. The facility has 17 canoes and two kayaks to choose from to travel the nearly mile and a half Millrace. The Canoe shack's number is 686-4386.

Solar center receives PGE grant

The University Solar Energy Center has been given a grant of $12,000 from the Portland General Electric Company.

The PGE grant is part of a new program being initiated by the company to demonstrate and test the application of solar energy for residential use.

The center, established in January, will use the funds for two purposes.

One project, under the direction of John Reynolds, associate professor of architecture, involves the preparation of a booklet for public use on how solar energy can be used for such things as residential space conditioning, domestic water heating and swimming pool heating.

Funds will also help the Solar Thermal Collector Group at the center, headed by David McDaniels, professor of physics, and Douglas Lowndes, assistant professor of physics, to improve and expand solar data gathering capability at the center. The group is focusing, in part, on developing new solar collection schemes, devices and materials.

The purpose of the Solar Energy Center is to help develop the needed technology for the use of solar energy and to facilitate its application in the Northwest, according to Aaron Novick, dean of the Graduate School who is acting director of the center.

Five students to study in Russia

Five University students have received scholarships from the Council on International Education Exchange to study the Russian language in Leningrad this summer.

The five are, Zachary Lent, Patricia Schiedler, Peter Kalfas, James Majusiak and Thomas Shridler.

The students will be in Russia from June 17 through Aug. 19. The scholarship provides for all expenses except for spending money and transportation to New York City for the flight to Russia.

In order to qualify for the award the students must have completed at least two years of Russian language study. To win the awards the students had to write essays in English and Russian, take a specialized test, plus send letters of recommendation.

Following the six weeks of study the group will tour Russia.

Rally squad selects ten new students

New rally squad members were selected last week.

The new format includes five men and five women, a change from the past system of six and three. The five men are Mike Maulding, Bob Nicholl, Duane Stutzman, Andre Baugh and Kelly Umenhofer.

The five women are Debi Briggs, Layne Gray, Georgene Rose, Mari Henvy and Carolyn Morris.

Last year's squad was rated seventh in the nation. This year's squad will attempt to surpass this rating through innovation in stunts and dances, according to Julie Holt, rally advisor.
