J-school slates Women's caucus at Lane lecture today

Newbold Noyes, former editor and part-owner of The Washington Star, will be the inaugural speaker in a new series of annual lectures to be launched next month at the University School of Journalism.

Noyes will deliver a public address today in the EMU Ballroom, after spending several days at the journalism school in informal meetings with students and faculty members.

He will be the first speaker in a series endowed to the School by Mrs. Robert Ruhl of Medford, widow of the long-time editor of the Medford Mail-Tribune. Mrs. Ruhl's gifts to the School make possible the establishment of the annual Ruhl Symposium in Journalism, which will involve the visiting lecturer and also the appointment of two Ruhl Fellows.

Two prominent women politicians will be featured at the fourth annual convention of the Oregon Women's Political Caucus Saturday at Lane Community College cafeteria.

Norma Paulus, Republican state representative and candidate for Secretary of State in the 1976 primary election, will make the keynote address at 10 a.m.

At noon Democratic State Sen. Betty Roberts will be presented with the Caucus' Woman of the Year award. Roberts ran in the 1974 primary for Democratic nominee for governor. She also ran in the general election for the U.S. Senate when candidate Wayne Morse unexpectedly died. Roberts is running for re-election to the state senate next year.

Convention registration will open at 9 a.m.

The convention will adjourn at 4 p.m. Registration fee is $3.50 but will be waived for those unable to attend otherwise. Non-members of the Caucus are welcome to participate. Advance registration must be made for day care and overnight lodging. Telephone Barbara Colburn, 207 Norman St., Eugene, 689-4087 for further information.

Bureau lacks place for horses gathered

PORTLAND, Ore. AP — The U.S. Bureau of Land Management has gathered 190 wild horses from eastern Oregon rangelands during the last three weeks but may be running out of places to put them.

The horses are being gathered at a cost of about $300 per horse to reduce grazing on the ranges used by cattle and wildlife. The horses are moved to Burns for assignment to individuals.

Murl W. Storms, BLM director for Oregon, said the number of people interested in caring for the horses is dwindling.

He said the agency has 75 horses but only about 100 applications from people who want them. He said about half the people who have applied for a horse in the past have decided later against taking one of the animals.

He said the agency also has 27 older stud horses, which are harder to break, that nobody wants.

Wild horse herds in Oregon have increased about 20 per cent each year since the 1971 wild horse law provided protection for the animals.

BLM is required to manage the wild horse herds on federal land at the same population levels as existed in 1971. Also, the horses cannot be moved to areas where there were no herds in 1971.
