Gov. Straub wants youth in Salem

Gov. Bob Straub said recently he is actively seeking names of youths to serve on the some 200 boards and commissions in state government.

"Some boards and commissions seem to be natural for young people," Straub said. "The Arts Commission, the Bicycle Advisory Committee, the Scholarship Commission — all directly affect young people."

Straub pointed out, however, that other boards and commissions such as the Committee on Field Burning, the Government Ethics Commission, or the Energy Conservation Task Force also affect the lives of young people and could profit from the involvement of interested and knowledgeable youth.

"The point is that young people have a vast range of interests and abilities," Straub said. "I want those young people to be involved in our state government."

Persons under age 25 may obtain a complete listing of the state boards and commissions by writing the Governor's Commission on Youth, 555 13th Street N.E., Salem, OR 97310.

Application and personal information forms are available from the same office.
