

Bank selects finance prof

George Kaufman, banking and finance professor at the University, is serving a three-month term as visiting scholar at the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco.

Kaufman has an office at the bank and will draw on the bank's facilities while conducting his personal research. His term began in January.

He is currently on leave from the University and has been serving as a visiting professor at the Stanford University Graduate School of Business.

Kaufman was a senior economist and assistant vice-president of the Federal Reserve bank of Chicago before joining the University faculty in 1970.

Lunch to aid Viet program

Several dozen peace and religious groups are determined to rebuild what was destroyed in Vietnam in the name of the American government.

Part of this effort is the Friendship program, designed to send medical and food supplies and reconstruction tools to the Vietnamese. Clergy and Laity Concerned is sponsoring a benefit lunch for the Friendship program.

Soup, bread, fruit, cheese and beverages will be served Wednesday at the Backdoor Coffee House in the Koinonia Center, 1414 Kincaid St. The lunch will cost 50 cents and will last from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Baked goods will also be sold.

Crowd control hearing slated

Crowd control at McArthur Court will be the subject of a public hearing scheduled for Thursday at 2 p.m. in the EMU. Incidental Fee Committee Chairer Jamie Burns has called the hearing to explore possible options for controlling the crowd in the interest of student safety.

"It's an unhealthy situation," says Burns of the pre-basketball game crowd. He feels it is important to hear from students to attend the basketball games, especially those who wait during a good portion of the morning and afternoon before the game, those who, because of academic or employment constraints are relegated to the third balcony, and those who arrive late but do not go to the end of the line, the so-called "crowders".

Burns hopes to explore the possibilities of using barricades, police control or reserved seating. These options for control would be financed by incidental fee monies. For example, since the cost of hiring four police officers for two hours is $80, students must decide if they are willing to spend funds in this manner, according to Burns.

Seniors eye housing plan

The Eugene chapter of the Gray Panthers met last Friday at the Kaufman Senior Center to discuss the possibilities of cross-generational housing in Eugene.

Cross-generational housing has proven to be one of the most successful senior citizen programs in the United States. One of the reasons for its success is the source of funding. Individual rent payments are the sole financial base of the program. This eliminates the problems of acquiring federal grants and local governmental funding.

The Gray Panthers are eager to build a strong cross-generational housing program in the Eugene area with the purpose of keeping students and senior citizens active in the community.

There will be another special Gray Panther meeting to draw more community support this Friday at 4 p.m. at 273 E. 17th Ave.

Library shows gift collection

A gift described as "one of the largest historical collections" of conservative thought in America has been opened to the public by the University library.

The gift is a 1975 donation from conservative author and journalist Howard Kershner. It includes his files and correspondence on founding the Christian Freedom Foundation, and other letters concerning UNICEF and Save the Children Foundation.

A Quaker, Kershner was active in humanitarian efforts in the Spanish Civil War and in unoccupied France during World War II. He is the author of several books including "Quaker Service in Modern Warfare" and "The Menace of Roosevelt and His Policies." He also wrote a newspaper column called "Its Up To You," which once appeared in more than 300 papers nationwide, and was the host for a weekly radio show, "Howard Kershner's Commentaries on the News."

The Kershner papers are part of a large collection of conservative literature at the University which includes papers by T. Coleman Andrews, founder of the John Birch Society, and William Buckley Jr.

Besides the author's own letters, Kershner's collection contains many leading conservatives such as Herbert Hoover and Robert Welch.

The collection is being showcased in the library's special collections room. It can be seen, on request, between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. daily and 7-9 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

SAB reborn; lists functions

The Student Administrative Board, (SAB), which collapsed with the departure of former ASUO Pres. Robert Liberty's administration last year, will soon be re-established according to Jim Davis, ASUO vice-president.

The seven-member board will be appointed by Davis and will have six major functions.

- Formulating policy relating to extra-curricular activities for student organizations.
- Granting or withdrawing recognition to student groups.
- Scheduling campus events and programs.
- Authorizing fund-raising activities.

- Formulating policies for the use of facilities by campus groups.
- Serving as a clearinghouse for films.

Davis sees the most important function of the SAB as the overhauling of fund-raising policies.

Aliens urged to file reports

Lyle Dahlin, district director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, today urged all aliens in Oregon who have not yet filled out alien address report forms to do so before January 31 at the nearest Immigration and Naturalization Service Office or local Post Office.

The immigration official pointed out that the law requires all non-citizens, except persons in diplomatic status and foreign representatives to certain international organizations, (such as the United Nations), to report their addresses to the government each January.

"We have tried to make it as convenient as possible for non-citizens to meet the address report requirements," says Dahlin. "In view of the serious penalties for willful violation, all persons subject to the address report law are urged to fulfill this obligation before the end of January."
