

Mock UN confab held

The Northern Regional Conference of Model United Nations (MUN) of the Far West met Friday and Saturday in Portland. A delegation of 60 University students attended.

The University contingent, the largest at the conference, was the first Oregon delegation to attend in four years.

Topics debated included the status of women in their country's economic development, problems of international trade, and Israeli practices in the Middle East.

Three University students won the honor of presenting committee reports to the General Assembly.

The success of the University group at the Portland conference has spurred hopes of the MUN'ers that emergency funding will be granted by the Incidental Fee Committee in order to make attendance possible at the Far West Conference, to be held this spring in Oakland, Calif.

University rules aired today

A public hearing concerning new rules for faculty records, special fees, student conduct, residence hall governance, married student housing and student records at the University will be held today at 9 a.m. in the Dad's Room at the EMU.

The hearing will invite written or oral comment by interested persons on the following proposed rules:

- Faculty records policy. Adopted as temporary policy on Aug. 7, the proposed policy deals with the kind of information to be maintained by the University, restrictions on use and access and provisions for the duplication and disposal of personal records in the University files.

- A list of special fees, fines, penalties and service charges levied by the University during 1975-76

- Delegation of authority regarding student activities, use of campus facilities and fundraising activities. Adopted as temporary rules on Sept. 26 the proposed rules concern the authority of the ASUO Executive to regulate student activities and the authority of the EMU director to approve and schedule fundraising activities.

- Student conduct. The proposed rules specify violations of the student conduct code, describe sanctions that may be imposed for the commission of offenses and set forth procedures for deciding cases brought under the conduct code.

- Residence hall governance system. The proposed rules provide a three-unit system of governance, consisting of a Dormitory Grievance Committee, an Inter-Dormitory Standards Board and a Unit Advisory Board.

- Married student housing. The proposed rules provide for a Married Student Housing Council, describe its procedures and powers, set forth responsibilities that may be delegated to tenant organizations and specify management responsibilities that may not be delegated.

- Student records. Circulated by memoranda of Sept. 1, 1972 and Nov. 15, 1974, the proposed policy concerns the University's role in obtaining, recording, maintaining and disseminating information about students, the nature of the directory information that may be released without the consent of a student and rules governing a student's access to his or her own records.

The University has proposed that these rules become effective April 1. Copies of the proposed policies are on file with the Secretary of State and are available for public inspection on campus at the library reference desk, ASUO office, Suite 4, EMU, and 110 Johnson Hall.

Students' W-2's already mailed

The W-2 statements which are needed to complete both federal and Oregon tax returns were mailed by the controller's office on Jan 13. Students who have not received their W-2 forms should come to the payroll department, 122 Oregon Hall in the business office and have a form prepared.

Indian outlines candidacy

Jerry Running Foxe, president of the Confederated Indian Tribes of Western Oregon, will discuss his Democratic candidacy for U.S. Representative from the Fourth District today at 12:30 p.m. in 121 Law.

Foxe's speech is open to the public and is sponsored by the Student Bar Association.

A resident of Cottage Grove, Foxe is a counselor for the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act and Outreach Programs. He is chief of the Coquille Indian Tribe.

Prof to discuss solar power

Edward Mazria, University assistant professor of architecture, will deliver a free public lecture tonight at 8 p.m. in 107 Lawrence Hall.

His talk is entitled "Demystification of Solar Technology," and will cover the basic theory and application of passive solar energy systems to building design.

For the past year and a half, Mazria has been researching the integration of both active and passive solar energy systems at the University of New Mexico.
