

Poet presents original works

Oregon's premiere poet, William Stafford, will present readings from his works and will describe the poet's contribution to Northwest life in a public talk Monday at the University.

His presentation will begin at 7:30 p.m. in Gerlinger Lounge. The event is one program in a spring term symposium series entitled "The Northwest Passage into the 21st Century," coordinated by the Honors College.

A professor of English at Lewis and Clark College in Portland, Stafford is one of the Northwest's most acclaimed poets. He has been honored with the National Book Club award, a Guggenheim award, and the Shelley Memorial Award.

In 1970-71, he served as a consultant in poetry to the Library of Congress.

His work has been included in many anthologies and he has been a frequent contributor to Northwest Review, the University's literary magazine.

Cultures highlighted at festival

The Cherry Blossom Festival, an evening of Chinese, Japanese and Korean cultural experiences, is being held at 7:30 p.m. Sunday at Sheldon Community Center 2445 Willakenzie Rd.

The festival is open to everyone and will offer dances and music from each country, a tea ceremony, Kung Fu demonstrations, displays and other activities.

There is no admission charge.

The Cherry Blossom Festival is part of the American Patchwork Series sponsored by the Eugene Parks and Recreation Department. The series is highlighting different cultures that have contributed to the American mosaic culture.

Political misinformation amended

The Emerald regrets that it accidentally sacrificed accuracy for speed in three political stories in Thursday's edition. On page 2, we announced State Representative Mary Burrows as an "incumbent Democrat." Burrows is a Republican. On page 11, we said that Congressman Jim Weaver is a Republican when actually he is a Democrat. And finally, on page 8, we stated that California Gov. Jerry Brown is campaigning for the write-in vote in Oregon. Brown's campaign headquarters say there is no effort being made to get the Oregon vote, and that organizer Bill Milius is working entirely on his own.

Center to air problems of aged

The problems of aging and the aged will be dealt with in 14 specialized workshops to be offered to the public through the Oregon Center for Gerontology during summer session.

The workshops intend to provide an understanding and awareness of the older person in society for business people, clergy, politicians, media personnel, funeral directors and others who come into professional contact with the elderly.

The workshops will last from three to 10 days and will cover topics such as planning preretirement programs for older employees, problems and needs in relation to the clergy and related professions, community programming and advocacy, health and mental health, and counseling practices for contemporary funeral services.

An introductory course in gerontology will cover theory of aging, psychological problems, family and sex roles of the aged, living conditions after retirement, and death. Other workshops, designed for gerontology students and working gerontologists, will provide training in death education and techniques of adult education.

Some workshops require preregistration, instructor consent, special fees or prerequisites. Complete information about the workshops and instructions for registration can be obtained by writing the Oregon Center for Gerontology, 1627 Agate St., Eugene or calling Linda Way of the Center at 686-4201.

They don't dance on Saturday

Recreational folk dancing in 103 Gerlinger is only on Friday and Sunday nights, not on Saturdays as the Calendar of Events listed yesterday. The Emerald regrets the error.

Workshop draws Pac-8 deans

Arts and science deans from all Pacific Eight Conference universities will take part in a two-day workshop Monday and Tuesday at the University.

Some 20 academic deans are expected to attend. The program will include work sessions on such topics as careers, confidentiality in personnel files, promotions, project and budget priorities, and research and institutional responsibilities.

Harry Alpert, University vice president for academic affairs and provost, will deliver the workshop's welcoming address at a noon luncheon Monday.

All working sessions will be held in the EMU.

Aussies plan Sunday festival

Contrary to first glance, Anzac does not stand for a national railway subsystem.

Local Australians plan a Sunday night celebration in the EMU Ballroom to inform the general public of Australian lifestyles in honor of Anzac and Australian Memorial Day, named for an Australian-New Zealand army corps. Running from 7 to 10 p.m., it will feature Australian food, aboriginal carvings and artwork, films and slides, and some aboriginal and rock music. The event is free and open to the public.

Coffee house delays opening

The Blue Heron Cafe, 879 E. 13th Ave., featured in a Surface and Symbol story Wednesday, will open 8 a.m. Monday. The new coffee house planned on opening today, but delayed delivery of some kitchen equipment changed the schedule.

MEETINGS

The Student Bar Association will host Professor Roger Findley at the School of Law today at 12:30 in Room 229. Mr. Findley will speak on "Regulation of Aircraft Noise" and other environmental matters, such as the controversy over the SST. He is currently a visiting professor at University of California (Davis) and directs the Office of Environmental and Planning Studies at the University of Illinois. He is the author of articles on environmental law and land use. The speech is open to the public.

A free slide-talk show entitled "Fungi in Tree Tops" will be presented tonight at 8 in 123 Science. George Carrol, associate professor of biology, will present the talk. He spent one year in Denmark studying taxonomy of certain groups of fungi. His talk will concern micro-organisms in trees. The show is open to the public.

Frank Okada, architecture and allied arts faculty member, will present a lecture today at 4:30 in 177 Lawrence. His talk entitled "Painting Since 1958" is part of the continuing lecture series presented by the School of Architecture and Allied Arts.

MISCELLANEOUS

All women students and faculty are invited to play softball with the Women's Studies Student Union. The first weekly game starts today at 4:30 p.m. on the University Park diamond (23rd and University Streets). Transportation to the field is available at Gerlinger turn-around at 4:30.

Auditions will be held for the play "The Boor" by Anton Chekov today in 201 Villard at 7:30 p.m. This play has been described as "a comic vaudeville piece that amused Russia for generations." For further information call the speech department office, x4171.

Mike Manley, Olympic hopeful from the Oregon Track Club, will work on jogging techniques at Saturday's beginning joggers session, to be held from 10 a.m. to noon at Willagillespie Community School. The school is located on 1125 Willagillespie Road, near Valley River Center. The sessions are free of charge and will be held each Saturday through May 29.

A two or four mile run will be held Sunday at 1:30 p.m. at Alton Baker Park. Individuals can run for time or just for fun and fitness. There are no entry fees or prizes, but times will be called.
