

Student seeks 'soap' viewers

Bored suburban housewives are not the only viewers of the daytime soap opera "All My Children." The popular serial claims an audience that includes the largest percentage of male viewers of any daytime soap opera.

Puzzled by this "All My Children" phenomenon, Ron Compesi, a University graduate teaching fellow, is conducting a survey on its popularity. He requests all male and female viewers of the serial to fill out a questionnaire about their attitudes toward it.

All information collected will be anonymous and respondents need not identify themselves on the questionnaire. Those interested in participating should call Compesi at 343-1997. Questionnaires will be mailed to participants' homes.

The project is conducted in association with the Communication Research Center in the University's speech department.

Show features baroque music

A free public concert of early music, featuring one of the leading American scholars in the performance practice of early music, will be presented Sunday at 1:30 p.m., in Central Lutheran Church, 18th and Potter streets in Eugene.

The University music school concert will feature George Houle, director of the New York Pro Musica Antiqua, professor of early music at Stanford University and specialist in 16th, 17th and 18th century dance.

Houle also will offer a free public lecture on Saturday from 3:30 to 5 p.m., in 103 Gerlinger Annex. He will discuss and answer questions about the performance of early music and dance. Sunday's concert will include two trio sonatas for flute, oboe and continuo by Telemann; a sonata for oboe, gamba, and continuo by Boismortier; and a dance suite for flute, oboe, gamba and continuo by Marais.

Houle will perform on the baroque oboe. He will be joined by his wife Glenna on the viola da gamba and University faculty members Richard Trombley, baroque flute, and John Hamilton, harpsichord.

The New York Times has written of Houle and the New York Pro Musica Antiqua, "It was hard to know which to admire most...the scrupulous scholarship and care, or the charm and gaiety with which the troupe brought the music to life. Seldom has old music been removed so firmly from the antique category and restored as both significant art and high entertainment."

Talk planned by geographer

A geographer from the University of California at Davis will present a talk entitled "Possible Early Trends — Pacific Exchange Between China and Meso-America" Friday at noon in 108 Condon Hall.

Speaking will be Stephen Jett, who has published more than 30 articles on the American Indian. The public is invited and admission is free.

Indian to give lecture on yoga

A talk entitled "Yoga Meditation and Divine Love" will be given Friday at the EMU.

The talk will be given by Didi Vishnupriya, one of the first women yoga-meditation teachers to visit the United States. Vishnupriya began her study of yoga in her native Philippines and then continued her studies in India. While there, she became adept at yoga meditation techniques taught by Shrii Shrii Anandamurti, a controversial Indian spiritual leader who is now under trial in India because of his opposition to corruption in Indira Gandhi's government.

Vishnupriya has traveled extensively throughout the United States and Canada, teaching meditation and other yoga practices. She has also been a leader in the struggle to revolutionize the role of women in spiritual life. This is her first visit to Oregon.

The talk begins at 7:30 p.m., room to be posted in the EMU. The event is sponsored by the Eugene Ananda Marga Society. There is no admission charge.

Local musician slates premiere

A work by local composer Edmund Soule of the University Library will premiere at a University Chamber Choir concert Friday at 8 p.m. in Beall Concert Hall at the music school. Admission is free.

"A Stone, A Leaf, A Door; Four Poems by Thomas Wolfe" is the title of Soule's composition, which was composed especially for this concert. It is scored for chorus, mezzo-soprano and baritone soloists and an instrumental ensemble of woodwinds, strings and percussion.

James Miller will direct the Chamber Choir.

The Soule work will be preceded by four short pieces by the Renaissance composer Rolando de Lasso and followed by Mozart's "Miss Brevis, K. 192, in F Major."

Middle class subject of talk

"New Middle Class/New Working Class" is the title of a lecture to be delivered Friday at the University by David Matza, authority on social stratification and labor.

Matza will appear in 72 PLC at 3:30 p.m. The public is invited, free of charge.

Matza is on the faculty of the University of California at Berkeley. He has written extensively on deviance and delinquency and won the C. Wright Mills award for his book "Becoming Deviant."

The sociology department is sponsoring his appearance on the campus.

Forum weighs knowledge use

OEPBS Radio KOAC (550) and KOAP-FM (91.5) will broadcast "live" national coverage of the third in a series of four National Academy of Sciences Bicentennial Forums entitled, "The Use of Knowledge: Frontier Expansion or Inward Development." Coverage of the four hour special will be broadcast Saturday from 12:30 until 4:30 p.m.

In discussing the issues, distinguished members of the academy will address such questions as "Is there undue concern about the by-products and side effects of scientific progress" and "Where should our efforts be focused — outward expansion or inward refinement?"
