Robert Altman's
BREWSTER MCCLOUD
A magical mystery tour through the sex wilds of America seen from the birdseye view of an idealistic teenager living in the rafters of the Houston Astrodome like the latter day Phantom of the Opera and preparing for flight from the materialistic world with muscle propelled wings. His mentor is a fallen angel who is jealous of his virginity and signals her presence with timely bird droppings.

KEN RUSSELL'S THE DEVILS
What began as a 17th Century nightmare in France became an historical novel by ALDOUS HUXLEY and a play by JOHN WHITING. RUSSELL has drawn from all three sources and presented one of the most startling films ever made. It's M.C. Escher-like sets, vivid portrayals of exorcists and powerful performances by VANESSA REDGRAVE and OLIVER REED have inspired so much controversy that the EUGENE POLICE DEPARTMENT was present at the Cultural Forum screening last Fall. If you were one of the hundred people turned away last Fall, here is your chance to judge it for yourself.
