600 science fellowships available

Five hundred new three-year graduate fellowships and 100 postdoctoral fellowships will be awarded in March, the National Science Foundation has announced.

Offered by the foundation "as one means of promoting the progress of science in the U.S.," the graduate fellowships are awarded for study or work leading to master's or doctoral degrees in the mathematical, physical, medical, biological, engineering and social sciences, and in the history and philosophy of science.

Applicants for the graduate fellowships must be citizens or nationals of the United States and will be judged on the basis of ability. Deadline for applications is Dec. 1.

The postdoctoral fellowships will be awarded "for postdoctoral research and study on scientific problems related to national needs," specifically in the mathematical, physical, medical, biological, engineering and social sciences, the foundation said.

Applications for the postdoctoral fellowships are open to U.S. citizens or nationals with a doctorate in one of the previously mentioned sciences, or who have research training and experience equivalent to that represented by such a degree. Deadline is Dec. 6.

Further information and application materials for both types of fellowships are available from the Fellowship Office, National Research Council, 2101 Constitution Ave., Washington D.C., 20418.

Center receives $100,000 grant

The University's Center for Self-Development, which offers educational services designed primarily for students from low-income families, received a $100,000 grant for continuation in the 1976-77 school year.

The center, which is funded by the U.S. Office of Education, provides remedial education assistance to compliment University classes. The services are not restricted to low-income students, according to Lance Sparks, the center's assistant director but studies have found that income and quality education go hand-in-hand.

"Our center is geared to help the student whose educational background limits his or her chances of getting a higher education," Sparks says. "These students are usually poor or from minority backgrounds. We offer them tutorial and individual instruction in areas in which they need help, as well as personal and academic counseling."

Sparks says the center had been operating on three-year grants, but now it must compete for grant money yearly.

"The Region X Special Services Project Officer in Seattle told us that the center's grant proposal received the highest rating in the competitive grant application process this year," he said.

Editor speaks on China after Mao

"China After Mao" is the title of a lecture scheduled today at 3 p.m. by Maud Russell.

Russell lived and worked in China with the YMCA for 26 years, from 1917 to 1943. During those years of war and revolution, she came in personal contact with the movements of youth, women, workers and students which ultimately helped produce the People's Republic of China. Her speaking and reading knowledge of Chinese particularly assisted her to understand the social movements and nationalistic feelings which fed the Chinese revolution.

Russell has twice visited China since it became the People's Republic of China, most recently in 1972. She is currently the publisher of the Far East Reporter.

Sponsored by the University's Asian Studies group, Russell will speak in Room 167, EMU.

Russell will also speak Wednesday at 8 p.m. at Lincoln Community School, 650 W. 12th Ave., as part of the China National Day celebrations of the U.S.-China People's Friendship Association.

Weinstein appears at noon forum

Archie Weinstein, Democratic candidate for County Commissioner Position 1, will be the featured speaker in the third Brown Bag forum today from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. in the EMU, room to be posted.

Weinstein sought a commission seat two years ago through Archie's People's Party but was unsuccessful. This year he beat out incumbent Nancy Hayward for the Democratic bid in the primary and now faces Republican John Parkhurst in the general election.

Candidates and Issues: Today

Editor's note: This is a daily schedule of political events offered by the Emerald to provide persons with some exposure to the issues and candidates that will be on the general election ballot in November.

11:30 a.m. — Jerry Rust, independent candidate for Lane County commissioner, will discuss his campaign at a meeting of the Springfield Board of Realtors. At the King's Table Restaurant, 1360 Mohawk Blvd., Springfield. The $2 lunch is optional.

Noon — Jerry Lausmann, Republican candidate for Congress, will discuss his campaign at a "Lunch with Lausmann." At Bev's Steak House, 1905 W. Sixth Ave., Eugene. No-host $3.50 lunch optional, but those planning to eat should make advance luncheon reservations at Bev's.

Noon — Robert Wright, a NotI critic of the legal profession, will discuss "Do It Yourself Law" at the weekly Independent Forum. At North's Chuck Wagon Restaurant, Willamette Plaza, 29th and Willamette streets. The $2 lunch is optional.

Noon — Three women legislative candidates will discuss their campaigns at a meeting of the Women's League of the First Congregational Church. At Cascade Manor, 65 W. 30th Ave., Eugene. The $2 lunch is optional.

5 p.m. until 9:30 p.m. — The Lane County Republican Central Committee is sponsoring a no-host "fun and festivities" party and open house. All GOP candidates in Lane County, plus Republicans running for Congress and statewide office, are expected to be on hand. The sponsors promise "no political speeches." At the Eugene Hotel in the Forum Room. No charge except no-host refreshments.

7:30 p.m. The Lane County Democratic Central Committee will meet for routine agenda and report from Democratic candidates in the county. At the Democratic Party campaign office, 873 Willamette St., Eugene. No charge.

7:30 p.m. — A candidates fair sponsored by the Crest Drive and Friendly Neighborhood associations. Featuring candidates for Eugene mayor, Eugene City Council (Ward 8), EWE (Wards 1 and 8), county commission and House Dist. 40 (South Eugene). At Adams Elementary School, 950 W. 22nd Ave., Eugene. MEETINGS

The ASUO Psi Center will hold regular staff meetings on Tuesdays, beginning today, from 12:30 to 2 p.m. in the conference room of Suite 1, EMU. All those in independent studies credited positions should attend. Students wishing to obtain fall, 1976 credit for Psi (psychical-related) research or for contributions to the Psi newsletter may attend for requirements and registration information.

Exceptional Friendship's orientation meeting will be held today in the YWCA lounge, Gerlinger Hall, at 3 p.m. New and old volunteers are required to attend.

A meeting of all the student program directors and interested personnel will be held in the EMU, room to be posted. The ins-and-outs, ups-and-downs, pros-and-cons of all 50 student programs will be discussed and persons will have an opportunity to meet with either the EMU director or one of her assistants in an effort to figure out an alternative to the Room to be Posted dilemma as well as other linky eccentricities you might like to propose. This meeting is to be considered a primary priority for program directors and anyone else with an interest in student programs and related activities.

MISCELLANEOUS

A program Wednesday called Two Revolutions: CHINA, will feature a 6 p.m. potluck dinner and a 7 p.m. Tai Chi demonstration. Also at 8 p.m. Maud Russell, long-time friend and native of China, will speak on China after Mao. Chinese books and posters will be on display. It's all at Lincoln Community School, 650 W. 12th Ave. and is sponsored by the US-China People's Friendship Association and May Day Cultural Committee.

WRA's deadline for entering intramural volleyball and water basketball teams is Wednesday at 5 p.m. Remember to get your entries to WRA's new location, Room 8 Gerlinger Hall. The captain's meetings will be at 4:30 p.m. Thursday, room to be posted.

Data cards for the annual Faculty/Staff Directory are due in the publications office, 310 Susan Campbell Hall. Department heads are reminded the information is requested for every full-time University employee, including graduate teaching fellows.

The campus telephone directory is published for use by members of the University community only. It is important that there be listed a campus telephone and office address where every employee may be reached when necessary.

The yellow data cards that were used in setting type for last year's directory were sent to all University offices on Sept. 1. All that most employees need to do is make sure the information is correct, initial the card, and return it to the departmental secretary for immediate delivery to the publications office. Publication of the Faculty/Staff Directory is scheduled for Nov. 1.

Dale Sloat and Sharon Taylor of the English department will present the Linguistics Colloquium today at 3:30 p.m. in 159 Straub. The topic will be "The Role of the Lexicon in Grammar."

Dr. Laurence Krantz will speak on "A New View of Medicine: Healing for the Whole Person" tonight at 8 in 313 Allen Hall. Krantz, a senior resident in family practice, is also the editor of a newsletter called Healing Currents. The talk is free. For more information, call Shepherd Hoodwin, 686-1840.
