

Latin Americans slate meeting

The Latin American Students Organization will hold its first meeting of the year Saturday at 3:30 p.m. in the EMU.

The purpose of the organization is to bring Latin American students together in order to share ideas and cultural experiences and present to the University community a more realistic view of their countries.

The organization plans to sponsor speakers, culture nights and films pertaining to Latin America.

A second purpose of the organization will be to help Latin Americans, both students and non-students, adjust to the American community.

Psych majors:

Two meetings for psychology majors will be held tonight in 146 Straub Hall. The first, at 7 p.m., will discuss preparation for applying to graduate schools in psychology. The second meeting, at 8 p.m. will discuss the varieties of courses and training programs available in the psychology department.

Speakers receive competition lauds

University speakers attended a tournament last weekend at Lewis and Clark College in Portland and were named the top university in individual events there.

Winners included Linda

Scronce, first place, rhetorical criticism; Dusty Rhodes, first place, persuasive; and Dale Buckley, third place, extemporaneous.

Group sets show

The Outdoor Program will present a multi-media slide show about Cooperative Wilderness Adventures tonight at 7 in 177 Lawrence. Also to be shown is a multi-media slide presentation about a 1975 CWA trip to Mt. McKinley.

Both shows are free and open to everyone. For more information, call the Outdoor Program at 686-4365 or 686-4364.

Tool library offers free equipment use

Action Now, the University's tool library, is accepting faculty and staff registrations for tool library use. The $8 registration fee will cover use of all the library services and allow the registrant to check out tools. The fees will be used to purchase more tools for the library stock.

Donations of tools and materials are also being accepted, both for the tool library and for the Energy Self-sufficient House Project. All donations are tax deductible. Action Now is also available to haul recyclable building material. Anyone with access to discarded lumber, bricks or glass is asked to call Action Now at 686-3702. They will pick up the material.

The agency is also seeking donation of a used, older refrigerator unit to be used in the creation of a heat pump system powered by a wind generator for the Energy Self-sufficient House.
