

Armory decision due

The Eugene Armory — is it up or down? That question may finally be resolved today as Lane County Circuit Court Judge Don Willner decides the fate of a suit filed by the Citizens Committee to Save and Use the Armory.

The county had originally scheduled demolition of the red-brick building, located at Seventh Avenue and Oak Street, for Oct. 11 saying the 61-year old structure is unsafe and a public hazard. The citizen's committee won a temporary stay of that order Oct. 8 and the county was given until Monday to show why demolition should proceed.

Willner listened to three hours of testimony Monday. The committee is charging the county didn't follow proper procedures on awarding the demolition contract. Members of the committee have said they want the armory preserved as a historical landmark.

REDKEN

Veep tends policy, budget

Editor's Note: This is the fourth in a five-part series examining the four ASUO vice-presidential sectors and ASUO Pres. Jan Oliver's administration.

By TOM WOLFE
Of the Emerald

Except for ASUO Pres. Jan Oliver, Jamie Burns probably has more influence than any other student on campus when it comes to making ASUO policy decisions that directly affect students.

He acknowledges that grandstand plays aren't made from his office but says "What we (his staff) do affects students here and now."

Burns heads the ASUO Executive's administration and finance sectors and is the only vice-president constitutionally required by the ASUO.

One duty of that position is to investigate the budget of each ASUO program and recommend revisions based in his findings, to the Incidental Fee Committee (IFC). Burns says these budget decisions "can decide what a program is able to do."

He also manages ASUO elections, runs the athletic ticket lottery, monitors the hiring practices of ASUO programs and, as constitutional vice-president, assumes Oliver's authority in her absence.

In addition to his duties as vice-president, Burns sits on the Student University Affairs Board (SUAB) Committee on Committees, which places students in student-faculty committee positions.

"Substantive policy decisions in the University are made by these committees," says Burns, "and only 40 are filled." He encourages students to apply for the 120 positions that remain vacant.

Jamie Burns

Burns also sits on the Oregon Daily Emerald Board of Directors, the Development Fund Board of Directors, and the Centennial Planning Council.

Another of his vice-presidential duties is to administer the ASUO programs budget. ASUO program directors make budget requests through Burns by filling out and signing a contract that commits them to written details of the money's use. Burns then makes requisitions through the ASUO comptroller to the State Treasury where the money is held.

Interest accrued on incidental fees held in the treasury goes back into the state General Fund and not back to the ASUO directly. This policy applies to all state funding, Burns says.

ASUO elections also fall under Burns' jurisdiction. He is responsible for election policy decisions, and under his direction, the candidates' spending limit for IFC and other ASUO positions was reduced this fall from $150 to $75. Burns oversees the hiring of poll workers, sets election dates and handles election complaints. An elections court composed of law students decides cases that arise.

As the ASUO Affirmative Action Compliance Officer, another vice-presidential duty, Burns monitors program's hiring practices to make sure they adhere to ASUO hiring policies.

Administrative assistant Myrna Harding and two work-study students comprise Burns' present staff, but he says he will probably increase the number now that "things are moving."

Last year Burns, a senior in finance, chaired the IFC. He served as junior class president during the '74-75 school year.

Although he supported Jim Davis for ASUO president, Burns says things have "turned out very well. We both espouse the goal of getting students behind what we're doing."

World Roundup

From Associated Press reports

Italian strikers, students clash

ROME—Strikes, arson and bombings plagued Italy on Wednesday as leftist leaders met defiance in trying to convince workers to swallow the austerity program of the new Christian Democrat government, which rules with Communist support.

Some 70,000 workers marched through downtown Milan in a violence-marred demonstration of union rank and file discontent.

At some places, the workers, taking part in a four-hour regional strike, scuffled with ultra-leftist students who had their own ideas about protest.

Ford to keep Kelly, Brown

WASHINGTON — Pres. Ford said Wednesday he would retain FBI Director Clarence Kelley and Gen. George Brown, chairer of the joint chiefs of staff, despite their recent, controversial statements on FBI-press relations and U.S. military support of Israel.

Ford said a speech planned by Kelley attacking press critics of the FBI would not have reflected Ford's own views, and he said several of Brown's statements in an interview "were impudent, were ill-advised."

Tanker broadsides river ferry

LULING, La. — A Norwegian tanker crashed broadside into a loaded rush-hour Mississippi River ferry today, capsizing the river boat and throwing many passengers and vehicles into the swift-moving river. Sixteen bodies were recovered and officials said many other passengers were missing.

St. Charles Parish Sheriff John St. Amant said there were only 18 known survivors and predicted that rescue forces will find about 35 vehicles and as many as 75 people at the bottom of the river.
