

Willamette U hosts black students

The Minority Student Union of Willamette University will be sponsoring a Black Students of Oregon conference Saturday and Sunday. Students from Linfield College, Pacific University, Lewis and Clark, University of Oregon, Portland State University, Reed College and Willamette will participate in the weekend event.

Representatives from each organization will make a brief presentation about his/her organization including its goals, structure, finance, problems, and influence on campus and community. Discussion will also focus upon how the Oregon Black Student Unions could collectively support the NAACP's current court battle in Mississippi.

Other activities planned for the two days include a co-ed volleyball tournament, swimming, and a get-to-know-you-better gathering. For more information, contact Lisa Powell at 370-6231 in Salem.

Christians host folk-rock worship

The Campus Christian Ministry is offering University worship services, starting Sunday at 11 a.m. at the Wesley Center, 1236 Kincaid St.

This new series of worship services, which will be held every Sunday during the school term, is intended for the University community and others who want to share an ecumenical worship experience in a contemporary, folk-rock style. Pastor Norm Metzler of the Campus Christian Ministry, who is coordinating these worship services, says the accent will be on informality, participation, a spirit of celebration, and themes that speak to the students' situation.

Services are open to the public. A coffee hour will follow the worship services.

Mercer gets SUAB post

The contest for Student University Affairs Board Position 4 was settled narrowly Wednesday. Candidate David Mercer won by a two-point margin over Jeff Taylor. Mercer received 18 votes to Taylor's 16. The position represents the business/economics constituency.

TV taps seniors

The Division of Broadcast Services at the University will begin a series of 30-minute shows this Sunday at 1:30 p.m. on KOZY Cable TV dealing with the community activities of University programs involving older citizens of Lane County.

The program, produced in cooperation with the University Center for Gerontology will begin at 1:30 p.m. on KOZY Cable TV 11 with a panel discussion of "What is Gerontology All About?"

Speech meet draws out-of-staters

The University forensics squad is hosting a speech tournament for students from 22 schools in five states today through Saturday.

The public is invited to attend team debate scheduled for today and individual competition Friday and Saturday, time and room to be posted in the EMU.

University students Nancy Boxerman, Mark Gordon, Leslie Gill, Dusty Rhodes, Dick Grey and Chuck Robbins all placed in a forensics meet in Arcata, California, last weekend.

Library offers geography show

A presentation and discussion of selected prehistoric and historic sites with regard to the principles of their design will be given Friday at 3:30 p.m. in Studio C of the main library's audio-visual center.

Falken Kalin, a graduate student in geography, will utilize cosmology, astronomy, mathematics, and natural systems of organization during his description of historic sites. Sites which will be included during the discussion are Gizeh (Egypt), Mycenae (Greece), Peking (China) and Chichen Itza (Yucatan, Mexico).

Benefit spotlights local musicians

Four Eugene groups, Shinola, Dakota, Mithrandir and The New Mime Circus, will give a benefit performance Sunday in the EMU Ballroom at 7 p.m.

Profits from the dance will go to two Eugene services, Switchboard and White Bird Sociomedical Aid Station. Tickets are $3 in advance and $3.50 at the door.

Tickets for the ASUO-sponsored benefit may be purchased at EMU Main Desk, Everybody's Record Co., Chrystal Ship, Springfield Creamery, Valley River Center and Sun Record Shop.

We urge all eligible faculty to vote in the election on November 9th and 10th which will decide whether the University will have collective bargaining; and if bargaining is chosen, who shall be the designated representative of the faculty. We strongly encourage our colleagues to support the AAUP in this election.
