Housing some 1.3 million volumes and a staff of professional specialty librarians, the largest library in Oregon — the University Library — is probably the main aid to learning on campus.

Materials in the main library and its campus branches are available to both students and the general public. The library uses an open stack system.

The main library contains the bulk of the University's supplies of books and journals. The card catalog, catalog information service and education-psychology division are located on the library's first floor.

The following sections, unless otherwise stated, are open during the main library operation hours, which are:

Monday-Thurs.	8 a.m. to 10 p.m.
Friday	8 a.m. to 5 p.m.
Saturday	9 a.m. to 5 p.m.
Sunday	2 to 9 p.m.

Catalog Information Service. Librarians on staff at this desk will assist persons in using the library, give personal tours and aid in researching topics for term papers or theses. The library has 50 faculty librarians, each with a speciality in a particular field, in addition to some 90 classified librarians and several hundred student workers.

Monday-Friday 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Education-Psychology Section. One of the few sections of the library which experiences a sharp increase in use during the summer months, the education-psychology section contains collections of juvenile books and elementary and secondary school textbooks especially geared to aid educators in their advance work. The section also contains a special collection of ERIC indexes and microfiche.

Orientalia Collection. This collection has Chinese and Japanese language books and periodicals for use mainly by advanced students and faculty for research. Special assistance is provided by the Orientalia bibliographers.

The second floor of the library contains the social science section with books and journals for the student of the social sciences, journalism and business.

Documents Section. The documents section offers materials from the U.S. Government as well as Canada, the Organization of American States and the Common Market countries. Publications of the United Nations and other international organizations are also available.

Included in the business section is a whole range of consumer and investment information. Corporation reports from Oregon companies are on file as well as reports from the "Fortune 500" companies. Summaries of market trends and marketing research are also available for student and public use.

The third floor of the library houses the humanities section with materials supporting the Books, books, books. There are literally millions of them in Eugene; over 1.3 million are right here on campus in the University Library. Many more are in the various other libraries on campus and in the city, with services ranging from general reference to genealogy charts.

Community facilities supplement University Library, reading rooms
