

All my children

If there was ever a good reason for corporal punishment in the home, little Phil is it. In fact, he's making a complete asshole of himself.

With Tara still in bed after her fall, little Phil has been staying with the Martins. But Wednesday, Phil decided to go pick him up and bring him home to spend the night. Everybody advised him not to, and little Phil wasn't real hot on the idea, but Phil pressured him into doing it "for his mother."

At home, Phil went off to cook supper, and little Phil invited with Tara. After the first I love yous were over, little Phil announced that he wanted to go shopping to buy a birthday present for Tad. Tara told him to forget it, and little Phil's reaction was to bounce up and down on her bed until he finally spilled her dinner all over her.

Enter Phil, a few good swats on the butt, and little Phil is off to the phone to call his dad to come get him. When Chuck got there, little Phil had already been sent to bed as punishment, and Phil and Tara wouldn't let Chuck see him. That left Chuck pretty pissed, and prompted little Phil to sneak out of the house after Phil and Tara had sacked out. Don't be surprised if little Phil runs into trouble before he makes it to Chuck's.

And Chuck's already got enough on his mind — he's trying to convince Donna that she should marry him. She wants to, of course, but she isn't sure it's such a good idea. Phoebe dropped by to see her the other day and warned her that if she "continues to chase after my grandson, you'll regret it more than you've regretted anything in your life." Chuck and Donna ought to just quit fooling around and move in together.

But as one relationship begins, another ends. Nick told Erica to shove it the other day. Seems he was upset about the fact that Erica told Mark Dalton the truth — that she and he were sired by the same man. "I'm finally starting to see you for what you really are, Erica, and frankly it makes me sick."

Even Danny Kinnicott had problems this week. Being the nice guy that he is, he offered to show Devin (she's the daughter of that new divorcee in town) around the University. At the student union, they ran into Brook who asked Danny to split up to the lake with her. Danny explained that he was busy for a while, but that he'd meet her there later.

Well, Brook doesn't enjoy people who don't do as she asks, and she up and went home, leaving Danny love-sick and worried. Looks like that weekend of fun and sex the two of them had planned for the coast might never happen.

Finally, Phoebe got some bad news this week. Remember those pajamas Benny stole from Mona's house? Well it turns out that by themselves, they don't constitute legal proof of adultery. It's going to take some photos to convince the court.

This is the house Aitian built

An architecture professor at the University, Grady Aitian, has devised a building which he is convinced will bring an end to the construction of the neutron bomb. In the event of a neutron bomb explosion, according to Aitian, his building falls down. "Yippie," said Aitian upon making the discovery.

Name game: Gary-Gary-bo-bary

Gary Fieldman, a long-time champion of the feminist movement, has once again decided to change his name. "I think it's only fair," said Fieldman. As of today, Fieldman said, he will be known as Gary Field-person.

Void P.O.ed at pool presence

Vandals and mischief makers moved identification signs all over campus Tuesday, causing hundreds of new campus residents and visitors confusion.

"Are you sure there's not a swimming pool in here," asked one would-be freshman climbing up and down the stairs of Deady Hall.

To avoid further confusion, students should make the following changes: the building labeled "Honors College" should be labeled "sewer," the building labeled "Hamilton" should be labeled "Gerlinger Annex" (this is the place where you will later buy your books), the building labeled "University Health Center" should be labeled "morgue," and the buildings labeled "Mens" should in fact be labeled "University of Oregon."

marked "Void's Office" and finding himself in the Gerlinger pool: "I'm pissed."

Dear Mom and Dad,

Am really enjoying myself at Early Orientation. I've spent all day taking official "Tours of the Dorms." This guide takes us around to every room and points out wierd growths and flora on the rugs.

In the cafeteria, you will be glad to know, they list the four basic food groups, and serve each of them in equal proportions; vegetables, meats, dairy products, and grease.

Remember Kathy and Dianne, the girls I grew up with? Kathy used to come over to our house for lunch every day, and Dianne and I were on the basketball team together. Well, last night I lost them in the EMU, and they are presumed dead.

I'm still trying to vacuum up my wierd neighbor who has taken up residence on my floor.

Hope you are fine, Love
Bertha
