

Energy savings require "muscle" claims Pollock

By RONDA BISHOP
Of the Emerald

Conservation is popular to talk about, but hard to accomplish without muscle and compulsory measures said Walter Pollock, Oregon supervisor of energy and resource development at a Tuesday meeting of the Lane County League of Women Voters.

Pollock, whose agency in the Oregon Department of Energy is responsible for all conservation and alternate energy plans, finds forecasts of energy growth "academic." Oregon forecasts indicate a declining energy growth rate, he said, but they do not take into account variation of present sources or increases in population.

Pollock pointed out that statistics show Eugene and Portland to be two of the most desirable U.S. cities of their size. This indicates, he said, that Oregon's population may grow faster than that of other states.

Addressing the issue of resource allocation, Pollock said, "Without imposing mandatory measures, the only way to achieve gains is to greatly increase government subsidies and incentives."

Pollock described solar energy as the most "cost effective" alternate energy source. If Pres.

Carter's incentive for solar energy passes, he said, Oregonians could have approximately 50 per cent of the cost of solar projects paid for by government. Pollock said he has already had many inquiries about the tax credit for solar projects which went into effect in Oregon Tuesday.

Pollock reported that a 550-megawatt coal-fired power plant will be in operation here soon. He cautioned against viewing coal as the answer to the energy situation, however, because of the environmental costs.

Regarding other alternate energy sources, Pollock sees opportunities in bioconversion and geothermal power.

Westmoreland chosen for new BRING site

The county-wide recycling organization, Begin Recycling in Neighborhood Groups (BRING) has a new service for University students, and at the same time is running into difficulties with an established one.

BRING has set up a permanent collection site at Westmoreland Student Housing for clear, brown and green glasses, aluminum and flattened tin cans without labels, and used automobile oil, according to BRING representative Elise Fischer. The drop location is in the fenced area behind the Community Building at 2065 W. 16th Ave.

The difficulties stem from garbage and plastics left during the week by students at the 13th Avenue and University Street collection point. "Recently people have been leaving recyclable materials and miscellaneous garbage at this site throughout the week," Fischer said. "This build-up has caused some distress to the University. People should only drop their materials there on Thursday afternoons between 1:30 and 3:30 p.m." She asked students to find another way of disposing of their plastics and garbage.
