Natural history museum opens to public again

The public display gallery at the University's Museum of Natural History has opened this week.

Sharon Nunn, office manager of the Willamette Science and Technology Center (WSTC), which has recently relocated its science store in the Museum, says the gallery and the store have resumed daily operating hours.

Hours for both the store and the gallery will be 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, Nunn says.

Groups planning to visit the gallery, however, are asked to make advance reservations. Reservations can be made by contacting Nunn at the Museum, 686-3024.

Library slated as subject of Tour du Jour

The Tour du Jour for this week will be a tour of the University Library, led by Dierdre Malarky, documents instructor at the library.

Interested persons are asked to meet Wednesday at noon to eat lunch at the Faculty Club, or to join the group for the tour at 12:20 p.m.

According to Fred Mohr of University Relations, reservations can be made by calling him at ext. 3021.

Short seminars offered

The Department of Urban and Regional Planning will offer short course seminars for credit on selected planning and planning-related topics.

Tonight and Nov. 11 from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m., the first one-credit class on urban growth boundaries will be offered in Room 210 Lawrence Hall.

The role of the hearings officer will be discussed by Allen Johnson on Nov. 15 and 29.

Each seminar section will meet at least two times. Persons enrolled in the seminars will receive one credit hour for each successfully completed seminar topic. Grading is on a pass/no pass basis only.

Further descriptions of the short course seminar topics are available in 213 Lawrence Hall. For more information, call 686-3635.

Outdoor slide show set

The University Outdoor Program will host a slide show and informational session on "How to Apply For Hard To Get River Permits" Wednesday and Nov. 17 at 7:30 p.m. in 142 Straub Hall.

In order to float white water rivers in the spring and summer, persons must apply now for permits, according to the Outdoor Program. This session will aid students when they apply.

Christian to talk on law

The president of Chalcedon, Inc., a privately owned, Christian educational organization based in Calif., will visit the University this week as part of a program on "Perspectives on the Law."

The program is financed by the National Endowment of the Humanities.

Rousas Rushdoony will lecture on "The Christian Roots in American Constitutional History" at 12:30 today in 129 Law.

At 3 p.m., Rushdoony will lecture on "Current Issues in Public Education: A Christian Perspective" in Room 250 of the Clinical Services Building.

Science grant received

The University has received a $15,000 grant from the National Science Foundation for two years' continued study by Robert Smythe, assistant professor of mathematics.

Smythe's work is on the random processes in percolation models. The models filter fluid through porous materials. Resulting mathematical studies may be useful to certain scientists, including physicists and petroleum engineers.
