

pac-8

Mike Drummond, driving against Cal's Gene Ransom in the Ducks conference-opening 49-47 win, will have to do a lot of scrambling if Oregon is to beat UCLA once more.

one because most of the teams in the Pacific-8 are rebuilding," commented Miller. "Everybody lost probably their best player, but UCLA probably has its best coming back."

Cunningham, while aware of the favorites role, is also aware that the rest of the Pac-8 believes the Bruins are more beatable than they have been in 15 years.

"I don't know if we'll win the league or not," said the first year Bruin coach. "Any team in the Pac-8 can beat any other team it depends on who can establish the best record on the road."

So far the Bruins have a good start in their quest to establish a road record, sweeping Washington and Washington State. So perhaps the coffin and grave are premature. But at least it's interesting to think they might be beatable.
