

Palestinian equality demanded

JERUSALEM (AP) — New Middle East peace talks opened Tuesday with an Egyptian demand for "an equal house for the Palestinian people" and a low-keyed Israeli call for "concession, compromise and mutual agreement."

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, staking out the middle ground, said the common goal of Egypt, Israel and the United States "and those absent today" — Jordan, Syria, and the Soviet Union — is a just, lasting and comprehensive settlement.

The strongly worded statement by Egyptian Foreign Minister Mohammed Kamel contrasted with the Israeli call for compromise, highlighting sharp differences between them, the legacy of the 30-year dispute.

Later, at a news conference, Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan said everything is negotiable. Every Egyptian proposal including Palestinian statehood would receive consideration, he said.

"The only thing we do not accept is a kind of ultimatum — take it or leave it.

"There is no deadlock," Dayan told reporters, "but that doesn't mean we are all doing wonderfully well."

The United States, claiming its mantle as mediator, gave qualified support to Palestinian self-determination but also said Israel was entitled to secure borders and true peace.

The public speech-making by Kamel, Dayan and Vance, in a spacious hotel ballroom festooned with flags and floral arrangements lasted only 17 minutes.

Afterwards, at an even briefer closed session, Egypt and Israel exchanged position papers on the Palestinian dispute and other key elements of a settlement and adjourned for the day.
