

hear and now

Arts and Entertainment

Thursday, January 19, 1978

A museum
of high art
the Indian way

It has no sign, no publicity, and virtually no recognition. Yet Eugene's Butler Museum of Indian Art has one of the finer collections of Native American art in Oregon. Using her own resources, Elizabeth Butler has gathered hundreds of pieces from throughout the United States — baskets from California, masks from the Northwest Coast, porcupine quillwork from the Great Lakes. Each object has its own distinct qualities, yet all share a common strength and impact. Please turn to Page 4B for the rest of the story.