Kick the habit in the butt

The American Cancer Society's "I Quit Kits" will be available Sunday through Feb. 11 to smoker who want to break the habit.

The kits will be distributed free of charge at KUGN radio station, Eugene and Springfield public libraries, the River Road Park District, the Amazon Village Community Center and the American Cancer Society, 1892 Willamette St.

The "I Quit Kit" is a complete program, containing a wide range of information and imaginative aids to help smokers quit. The first phase gives facts on smoking hazards, benefits of quitting, and tips on how to cut down. The second phase gives methods to help quitters maintain the non-smoking habit.

Smokers are encouraged to pick up their own kits. Trained persons will be on hand to have participants fill out questionnaires, explain each section of the kit, explain the follow-up procedures and answer any questions.

The American Cancer Society picked Lane County as a test market for the kits. A telephone survey of participants will be conducted six weeks after distribution to evaluate short-term success. At the end of five months a mail survey will be conducted to determine long-term success.

Chinese politics, painting examined by lecturer

A lecture on "Political Aspects of Chinese Painting During the Mongol Rule (1279-1368)" will be given Monday at 8 p.m. in Room 107 Lawrence Hall.

Jerome Silbergeld, who teaches Chinese art at the University of Washington, will give the lecture as part of the University Department of Art History's Maude I. Kerns lecture series on oriental art.

In the paintings of the Mongol period, also known as the Yuan dynasty, one finds indications, through style and subject, the protest of the educated Chinese against the foreign and so-called "barbaric" rulers.
