

Women's symposium filing deadline extended

If you wanted to participate in a workshop or panel discussion for the women's symposium to be held on campus in April, but missed the Feb. 10 filing deadline, you have a one-day reprieve.

Symposium coordinator, Donna Shepard, says the deadline for completing a form indicating interest in workshops has been extended to 5 p.m. today. Forms should be turned in to Shepard at Suite 4, EMU.

Shepard said the symposium currently seeks people who wish to help with publicity and to serve on committees to make posters and programs. She said volunteers are also needed to help with fund-raising and finding housing for symposium visitors.

Anyone interested in becoming involved in the symposium should contact Shepard by calling 686-3724.

JSU presents 'The Big Dig'

The Jewish Student Union will present an Israeli film, "The Big Dig," at 7:30 and 9:30 tonight in 177 Lawrence.

This is part of the first annual Israeli Film Festival, a series of award-winning feature-length Israeli movies, shown this month at the University. The film festival provides the opportunity for students to see Israeli films that ordinarily would not be seen in the United States.

Econ professor to discuss banking in Third World

"The New Gnomes: Multinational Banks in the Third World" will be discussed at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday in 238 Gilbert Hall by Howard Wachtel, professor and chair of the department of economics at American University.

Wachtel is widely known for his work in the fields of poverty, income distribution, labor, socialist economic systems and the new international economic order. In addition to his numerous publications, he has been a Fellow of the Transnational Institute and the Institute for Policy Studies. He is currently writing a book on the new international economic order.

The public lecture is sponsored by the University economics department.
