Ailing Oregon to face SOS

By MARK STEWART
Of the Emerald

Women's basketball coach Elwin Heiny will pack up his wounded and travel to Ashland for a game with Southern Oregon State College tonight.

The past ten days have been devastating to the Ducks, with five players coming up either injured or ill.

Debbie Adams, who strained a tendon in a foot against Washington, will be able to see limited action against SOS, as will Sally Blickle, who has had a nagging groin pull all year. Ann Doherty, who had her nose smashed in the Washington game, will also see some action, according to Heiny.

Peggy Shekell and Julie Cushing are continuing to improve after the flu and a sprained ankle respectively slowed them down last week.

Becky Paschke will be able to see limited action against Portland State Friday after spraining an ankle in practice a week ago Friday.

Although the Ducks beat Western Washington 78-60 Friday, Washington totally destroyed the Ducks Saturday night with a 2-1-2 zone, 72-50.

"We worked against the zone all day," said Heiny after practice Monday. "I suspect SOS will use a zone. We tried to analyze what went wrong (against Washington)."

Much of the problem, said Heiny, was the Ducks' inability to penetrate the zone because of injuries. "Sally (Blickle) would have made a difference," Heiny assessed. She's been our point guard all season. She gets the ball to the wings the best. I was told not to use her unless I had to."

Another problem the Ducks had in the Washington game was their inability to rebound. Because of her injury, Adams, who has been a terror on the offensive boards, was not played against the zone. Heiny said the team also missed Paschke and her rebounding.

Defense like this could be the key to Oregon's game plan against Southern Oregon. The Ducks will face the Ashland school without the services of several top players.

SOS, the Ducks won handily, 103-59. Heiny thinks SOS will give his team more of a run for the money this time around.

Heiny said his players got down once the team got behind Washington, and hopes that the mental attitudes will improve.

"One thing we disliked was we let down after we got behind," said Heiny. "We hung our heads. The players realized that and we hope to change that."

DUCK NOTES: The Ducks turned into real ball hawks last weekend, getting 34 steals in the two games, 25 against Western Washington.

Heather Tolford breaks women's two mile record

Heather Tolford set a school two-mile record to highlight the performance of the Oregon women's track team in the Washington All-Corners Indoor Track Meet, Feb. 12 in Seattle.

Tolford destroyed the old record of 11:11 held by Kim Spir, clocking a 10:39.6. Molly Morton finished second in the race in 11:02.9 and Debbie Richey was third, running an 11:13.6 to complete an Oregon sweep of the event. The two-mile was the only event held outdoors.

Another standout performance by the women came from Ellen Schmidt, who raced to a second place finish in the 880-yard run. Schmidt clocked a 2:14.5, coming in behind Deanna Coleman of the Falcon Track Club, who won in 2:12.7.
