

The body of Charlie Chaplin was stolen from his grave Thursday. FBI investigators have warned the University to be on the lookout.

"We think the thieves are going to put Chaplin on the lecture circuit," explained FBI man Zimbleous Effervescent. "They've done it with Ed Sullivan, and at $4,000 a crack, we can expect to see Chaplin behind the podium before long." Effervescent said all dead-looking lecturers are suspect.

To the Editor, Yes, I'm born again, and I'm proud of it. Being born again is my life.

And I take offense at Pres. Nullen Void's recent remark, "I don't mind being nailed against the wall if my own position is derived on a higher moral concern," delivered in a speech to Campus Christian Ministry.

This remark strikes me as messianic and tasteless. The crucifixion has always been a sore point with us Christians. It's the thorn in our side, and we don't like having it banded about.

As for the rest of Void's speech, I've devoted my life to making sense out of the ridiculous but I can't figure out what he said.

Our Christian mean streak is getting irked, Void, watch it!

Essay exams are coming, and to help you get through this time without doing any work, the Emerald has compiled a few hints on how to become a good essay writer.

Good essay writers make lots of allusions. They go on safaris looking for them. They cram them between facts. Use allusions.

Throw in lots of facts. The Emerald has taken a poll and found that three facts in a paper are enough to get you an A — no more, no less. Two of the three must be correct, however.

When you hit a writer's block, don't despair. Simply insert indeed, however, on the other hand or heretofore. This will effectively blur out whatever stupid thing you were writing and give your paper mystique. If you have nothing whatsoever to say, write the sentence, "Indeed, heretofore on the other hand, however."

You will get at least a C for the effort.

Words such as "metaphysical, truism, apropos, problematic and dichotomy turn professors on. Throw them in whenever you can. Put them all in one sentence, and your professor will have a literary orgasm.

Many students complain their essay topics border on the stupid and are not too far away from boring. Good observation. Professors do this to challenge you. They spend most of their waking hours trying to come up with sufficiently irrelevant topics so writers can press their talent to the sticking point and watch it drip. When you receive an irrelevant topic, relax and enjoy.

Finally, if your paper is too short, switch numerical systems. For example, a 10-page paper could be counted using a base four system. 1, 2, 3, 10. This makes your work easier. If you get caught, say you're a relativist.

Someday, the energy of the world's nations will come from a cell no larger than your toenail. Well, we at Horneywell are still working on that one.

At Horneywell, yesterday may be happening tomorrow, but today it is right around the corner.

This week's letter. This week's letter comes from H.R. Tishman in Tacoma, Wash.:

"Mr. Hatfield, if you do not know what you are writing about, it is best not to write, otherwise you will be correctly named a twit."

H.R. Tishman:
Thank you H.R. Tishman for your constructive criticism.
