Big publications get big attention. But small publications get attention, too — perhaps by not as many people, but certainly with more intensity.

Such small periodicals serve many of Eugene's needs. There are, for example, some 15 neighborhood newspapers, a magazine for worker-controlled businesses, a women's journal, and a publication for people active in holistic health. They're simple, and not very visible, but vital.

For a guide to Eugene's smaller publications, turn to pages 4B and 5B.
