

Governors boycott Carter's briefing

DENVER (AP) — Thirteen of the 19 governors on the water policy subcommittee of the National Governor's Association will be missing at a White House meeting Wednesday at which Pres. Carter is scheduled to brief them on forthcoming national water policy,

The Denver Post reported Tuesday. The newspaper, citing sources in Washington, said Massachusetts Gov. Micheal Dukakis reportedly is leading other eastern governors in a boycott of the meeting.

The governors were upset by what they considered an administration pullback on plans to deal with municipal water problems in large cities, the Post said. In Washington, Stephen Farber, director of the association, acknowledged that 13 governors on the panel would not attend the meeting, but attributed that to scheduling problems. Dave Liederman, a spokesman for Dukakis, said in Boston that the governor knew of no boycott and was unable to attend the meeting because of scheduling conflicts. A spokesman for the association, Joseph McLaughlin, acknowledged that representatives of eastern governors were not happy with the municipal water proposals, but said "a boycott would be very strong interpretation of that."

To Carol of Pi Phi's

At the function and getting my highs,
I met Carol of the Pi Phi's
The punch was good, the conversation right,
and soon we were walking in the cool dark night.
A snack at Vip's and the kiss goodnight
I had her number in my fish so tight.
Well this is where our story ends,
because I never saw Carol again.
The amount of messages I left was three,
to have her return my call to me.
No answer and in town for a week,
The view of the Pi Phi's could be bleak.
But I don't blame this group of ducks, because of a member who's manners suck!
