

Political activist Hayden to speak in EMU

Tom Hayden, a political activist since the 1960s, will speak in the EMU Ballroom tonight at 8.

His free appearance is sponsored by the EMU Cultural Forum.

Hayden was the first president of the Students for a Democratic Society, SDS, and was actively involved in the anti-Vietnam War movement. In 1970, he was one of the Chicago 7 convicted for conspiracy to demonstrate in Chicago during the 1968 Democratic Convention.

He then moved to Berkeley and removed himself from national politics.

In 1976, he ran for the U.S. Senate from his district in the Berkeley, Calif., area. Though he lost, Hayden aroused considerable citizen involvement. Currently, Hayden is administrator for Campaign for Economic Democracy (CED), an organization founded by Hayden and his wife, Jane Fonda.

The CED is heavily involved in a campaign for solar energy.

Hayden has worked on a plan known as Solar Cal to create a publicly controlled solar-energy industry in California.

Hayden's CED also lobbies in Sacramento for greater public involvement in corporate policy, low-income housing and a variety of other programs, while working for a pervasive grass-roots organization.

The headquarters are housed on a ranch above Santa Barbara, where Hayden, Fonda and their two children live. During the summer, the ranch is a summer camp for children of various backgrounds, emphasizing equalitarian, humane and environmental conscious principles.

Cycle to Salem for TDA

The Trojan Decommissioning Alliance (TDA) is organizing a "Knock Nukes Bike-A-Thon" from Eugene to Salem, June 20-23. Anyone interested in participating is invited to a dinner gathering at the TDA office, 348 W. 8th Ave., tonight at 5:30.

Participants in the bike-a-thon will visit Gov. Bob Straub and Fred Miller, state director of energy, and ask for immediate shutdown of the Trojan Nuclear Plant.

For information, contact Skeeter at 345-7394, or call the TDA office at 687-2557.

Protest speech today

An anti-nuclear protester will speak on the brick area outside the EMU today at 12:30 about efforts to stop nuclear power in Oregon.

Lloyd Marbet will speak about the initiative petition campaign to stop utility companies from charging customers for cost of power plants that do not yet produce electricity, according to Mark Cogan of Oregonians for Utility Reform.

Musicians to perform

The Fine Arts Quartet will perform at the last Chamber Music Series concert of the season Thursday at 8 p.m. in Beall Concert Hall.

The members of the quartet are Leonard Sorkin, violin; Abram Loft, violin; Bernard Zaslov, viola and George Sopkin, cello. They are currently artists in residence at the University of Wisconsin at Milwaukee.

The program will be Quartet in E-minor, Opus 44, No. 2 by Mendelssohn; String Quartet in one movement by Anton Webern and Quartet in E-flat, Opus 127 by Beethoven.

The quartet has performed in Europe, Australia, and Asia. The ensemble also performed weekly broadcasts by the American Broadcasting Company for eight years.

Although the chamber music series has been a sell-out, some tickets may be available at the Beall Hall Box Office one hour before the performance. Admission will be $3 for students and senior citizens and $4 for adults.

Overseas study still open

Applications are still being taken for Oregon summer programs in Austria, Germany and Italy.

For information on the Austria and Germany program, contact Prof. Helmut Plant in the German department. Information on the Summer Session at the Italian University for Foreigners is available from Sylvia Giustina in the University romance languages department.

Faculty receives Fulbright awards

Two University faculty have been named recipients of Fulbright awards for the 1978-79 academic year.

Harmon Ziegler, professor of political science and research associate of the University's Center for Educational Policy and Management, will serve as a senior scholar next year at the University of Sidney in Australia.

Theresa Ripley, coordinator of career planning and assistant professor of education, will participate in a three-month travel study fellowship to the University of Lund in Sweden.

Ziegler is a second-time Fulbright scholar and former recipient of Guggenheim and Ford foundation overseas study grants.

As a senior Fulbright scholar, he will do research in Australia and will participate in study seminars. His research work will explore the tension between the development of a highly technological society and a competing demand for greater citizen involvement in societal decision making.

Ripley will use her Fulbright grant to study at the Lund University's Leisure Studies Center next spring. Her work will center on leisure and its relation to careers.

Folk art scholar to give lectures

A leading scholar of American folk culture will deliver two public lectures Thursday and Friday.

Henry Glassie, head of the department of folklore and folklife at the University of Pennsylvania, will speak on "Folk Architecture and Social Revolution" at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in 177 Lawrence.

Friday he will address the question "What Is Folk Art?" at 12:30 p.m. in 283 Lawrence.

Glassie, recognized for developing methods for analyzing the building procedures of anonymous vernacular builders, is the author of several books, including "Pattern in the Material Folk Cultures of the Eastern U.S."

Both talks are free and open to the public. They are part of the Department of Architecture's spring lecture series.

Disarmament discussed

"Strategic Nuclear Disarmament" will be discussed in the Eugene City Council Chambers at 7:30 tonight, sponsored by the Lane County United Nations Association.

John Masser will emphasize the disarmament discussion to be held in special session at the UN General Assembly starting May 23.

Masser is regional director of "Operation Turning Point" and representative of the UN Association.

Tut tour seeks members

The Eugene Society of the Archaeological Institute of America, whose members are authorized to join the Vassar Club of Oregon on its tour of the King Tut show in Seattle, are looking for additional people to fill a bus in September.

The tour group will go to Seattle Saturday, Sept. 9. The group will view the exhibition entitled "The Treasures of Tutankhamun" before it is officially open to the public. The group will attend a luncheon at the Olympic Hotel for a presentation by Emily Teeter of the Oriental Institute at the University of Chicago. The tour group will return to Eugene Sunday afternoon, Sept. 10.

Cost of the round-trip bus fare, the entrance fee to the exhibition and the luncheon is $40 per person. Hotel reservations can also be made, and anyone wanting additional information should contact Frances Stern at the art history department, or call 344-1259.
