

Math room to be opened

A reading room in the mathematics department at the University will be dedicated Friday in memory of the man who headed the department from 1902-1938.

Andrew Moursund will be honored at a ceremony at 4 p.m., Room 210 Fenton Hall.

Under his direction, the department gained national recognition especially in the field of special summer and in-service programs.

Fred Andrews, head of the mathematics department will be master of ceremonies.

The dedication is free and the public is welcome.

Multi-media show slated

Don Schenck, a writing instructor for the Center for Self-Development, will present a multi-media rendition of Robinson Jeffers' "Roan Stallion" at the Eugene Unitarian Church, 40th Avenue and Donald Street, Sunday morning at 10:30.

Islene Running Deer will underscore the text of the narrative poem with piano music from Bartok, Poulenc, Satie, Brahms, MacDowell and Running Deer.

Ena Sherlin of the Eugene Dance Therapy and Yoga Center, will interpret both lyric and dramatic passages, which include paeans to nature, a 1925 prophecy of atomic fission, acts of bestiality and crucifixion as well as of tenderness and heroism.

The presentation will be recorded for an airing Thursday at 12:30 p.m. on KLCC Radio. A video tape will be shown on Teleprompter in early June.

Landscape artist to talk

A fine arts professor at the University will discuss his paintings and drawings Friday at 4:30 p.m.

Landscape artist Ralph Baker will deliver a lecture titled "On Looking Around, and Mexico, and the Valley River Series" at Room 177 Lawrence Hall. He will also discuss a series of recent paintings of the bike trail that leads to the Valley River Center in Eugene.

The talk, free and open to the public, is the last in a series of lectures sponsored by the School of Architecture and Allied Arts.

Law student wins grant

Karl Johnson, a University Law School student, has been named recipient of the Paul Patterson Memorial Fellowship for 1978-79.

Johnson, who will complete his law studies next year, is from Oklahoma City. The award is for $1,300.

Johnson has been active in the National Lawyer's Guild and the People's Law School, and has clerked with a Eugene law firm. He is a 1970 graduate of the University of Oklahoma. He worked as a reporter, photographer and editor before enrolling in law school.

The fellowship is awarded annually by the law school in memory of Paul Patterson, governor of Oregon from 1952 until his death in 1956. Patterson was a 1926 graduate of the University Law School.

Exec tapped to program

The chairer of the board of directors of the Fred Meyer Corporation will be on campus today and Friday to take part in a program of the College of Business Administration.

O.B. Robertson, who has been with Fred Meyer some 30 years, will serve as the college's last executive-in-residence for this school year. During his campus visit Robertson will teach classes in retailing, consumer behavior and marketing, and he will act as an adviser to students and faculty members.

The executive-in-residence program, which is scheduled on a monthly basis next year, helps build a relationship between the business community and the University, according to Charles Kitleson of the college faculty.

Prof nabs Fulbright honor

Glen Love, English professor at the University, has been awarded a Fulbright senior lectureship for the 1978-79 academic year.

Love, who is acting head of the University English department, will be teaching and doing research at the University of Regensburg in West Germany. He will offer lecture classes in the American novel and western American literature, and seminars on American literary prose style and on selected American authors. His research will investigate the reception of early modern American authors in Germany, as well as the popularity of western American literature in that country.

The new Fulbright winner has recently completed a book entitled "New Americans," which deals with the western response to urban industrial society in the American novel. Another book, a collection of essays on the culture of the Pacific Northwest entitled "Northwest Perspectives," edited by Love and Professor Edwin Bingham, University professor of history, is soon to be released as a joint publication of the University and the University of Washington Press.

As an Oregon faculty member, Love has taught literature and writing courses in the English department.
