"Dracula" (See Thursday's listing) "My Cup Ranneth Over" $1.50. Midnight. Oregon Repertory Theatre, Atrium. Written by Robert Patrick, the play concerns Yucca, a punk rock singer who achieves overnight success in New York, and Paula, her writer roommate whose greatest desire is to sell an article to Cosmopolitan. Director Carol Baker says, "change is the subject of the play... rapid change gets in the way of habits, alters old patterns and forces examination of their relationship." Part of the Midnight Mafia series. For more information: 485-1946.

Johannes Brahms' "German Requiem" $4 general, $2 students. 8 p.m. Churchill High School, Bailey Hill Rd. Presented by Eugene Opera under the direction of Philip Bayles, the performance will combine the talents of the Roseburg Concert Chorale, the Northwestern Christian College Chorus, the Eugene Community Chorus and the Eugene Opera orchestra and soloists. Combining passages of meditation and comfort, the choral piece was prompted by the death of Brahms' mother.

"Travesties" $3 and $4, UO students and senior citizens 1/2 price. 8 p.m. Robinson Theater. Written by Tom Stoppard, the play is a humorous treatment of three of the 20th century's revolutionary thinkers: James Joyce, novelist, playwright and composer of limericks; Tristan Tzara, co-founder of Dada and chance poet; and Lenin, political leader and avid student of Karl Marx. Uniting these characters is Henry Carr, a minor British bureaucrat who recalls events in Zurich in which they all participated during the Great War. His age-frazzled memory gives impetus to a medley of forms and styles of poetry, prose, music and theater. Directed by Jean Cutler. For reservations: 686-4191.
