

LCC offers 'safari'

"Summer Safari," a series of 10 weekend tours to points of historic and geologic interest in Oregon, will be offered this summer by the Lane Community College (LCC) Community Education Division.

The guided tours, which carry no college credit, will offer families an opportunity to experience an informal, first-hand introduction to the history, geology and biology of selected sites in the state.

The excursions begin Saturday, June 24, and will be held every consecutive Saturday through August. Two outings, on July 22 and 23, and on August 26 and 27, are scheduled two-day tours.

An August 12 tour will take visitors to Sumpter and Granite, two eastern Oregon ghost towns that are enjoying a modern rebirth, and will explore nearby mining operations and visit one of the largest gold dredges in the world.

A July 29 excursion to the coast will feature exploration of coastal intertidal zones and tide pools, and visits to Cape Perpetua and Newport, where participants will tour the Oregon State University Marine Biology Center, the Undersea Gardens and the wax museum.

Persons wishing to participate must pre-register by June 16. Tuition is $27, plus a $15 per trip travel fee. The cost does not include incidental expenses.

For further information call the LCC Downtown Center, 484-2126.

Student wins writing award

Winner of the 1978 award for teaching expository writing at the University is Dolores Stockton, doctoral student in English and assistant director of composition for 1977-78.

Stockton won the $500 prize donated by an anonymous emeritus member of the English faculty for her repeated teaching excellence in freshman composition and expository writing. She has taught writing classes at the University since the fall of 1973.

She taught at Western Illinois University from 1965 to 1967 and at the University of Washington from 1967 to 1969. She holds B.A. and M.A. degrees from the University of Arizona. She has published a short story and several poems, and is currently writing a dissertation on Victorian novelist George Eliot.

Stockton is among some 75 graduate teaching fellows in the English department teaching writing classes.

The teaching award is determined by members of the department's composition committee, which includes faculty, graduate students and undergraduates, on the basis of student evaluations, observations of classroom teaching, and teaching materials.

Chamber choir to give concert

Capella Antiqua, a local chorus and orchestra, will give the third in its series of concerts tonight at 8 at the Newman Center, 1850 Emerald St.

The group, Eugene's only permanent chamber organization, consists of 17 singers and 12 instrumentalists drawn from the University music school, Eugene Opera and the Eugene Symphony. The musical director and conductor is Terry Ross.

The concert is sponsored by the Eugene Parks and Recreation Department. Admission is $1.50 at the door.

Theater focus of program

The Institute of Renaissance Studies of the Oregon Shakespearean Festival, Ashland, Ore. announces its summer program, June 19 through July 29.

There are 30 diverse courses, for credit or non-credit, ranging from one week to six weeks in length, for two to 12 units, graduate or undergraduate credit.

The institute takes advantage of the festival's three theatres, one Elizabethan, two modern. A company of more than 150 actors, directors, dancers, musicians, teachers and scholars are available for all the courses.

The plays of the season are: "Richard III," "Taming of the Shrew," "The Tempest," and "Timon of Athens," Brecht's "Mother Courage," Moliere's "Tartuffe" and Zindel's "The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds."

Institute students receive a 15 percent discount on all tickets.

Some of the courses are: From Script to Stage (6 one-week courses); Shakespeare and the Drama of Religion (4 one-week courses); Workshop in Renaissance Music and Dance, The Art of Stage Fighting; The Festival Plays (3 two-week courses); The Shakespearean Renaissance Academy and Freshman English with a Difference.

For more information, write Homer Swander, director, Institute of Renaissance Studies, Box 14403, University of California, Santa Barbara, Calif. 93017, or call (805) 961-2911.

Alcoholism Lecture set

Treatment for alcoholism will be the topic of the next Alcohol Education Program tonight at 7:30 in the Scout Room of Central Presbyterian Church.

Jeff Davis, manager of the Substance Abuse Program, Lane County Mental Health Division, will be the speaker. Anyone interested is welcome to attend.

Third World discussed

The University YWCA-sponsored Women/Speak series will end the year with a panel of women discussing the Oregon Third World Women's Conference today at noon in the EMU, room to be posted.

The conference was held in Salem May 26 through 28. Panelists will discuss conclusions drawn from the conference and implications for the future.

For information, contact Kathy Smith at 686-4439.

Civic Center forum topic

"The Civic Center: What's in it for you?" will be the topic of an open forum at noon Wednesday in the EMU Forum Room.

Dean Baumgartner, development director for the Civic Center Project, will discuss the facility and its spaces and uses.

Woodwinds perform tonight

University music students will perform in a double-reed ensemble recital at Central Lutheran Church, 18th Avenue and Potter Street, tonight at 8.

Oboe and bassoon students and a woodwind quartet will present works by Mozart, Bach, Riecha, Beethoven, Morley, Berger and Boismortier. Admission is free and the public is invited.

Those in attendance will share information on whether the new facility will feature their favored events, how the spaces can be used and other details.

Citizens will be able to vote on the Civic Center on June 27.

A question-and-answer-session will follow Baumgartner's presentation.
