THEATER

"Travesties" $3 and $4, UO students and senior citizens 1/2 price. 8 p.m. Robinson Theatre. Written by Tom Stoppard, the play is a humorous treatment of three of the 20th century's revolutionary thinkers: James Joyce, novelist, playwright and composer of limericks; Tristan Tzara, co-founder of dada and chance poet; and Lenin, political leader and avid student of Karl Marx. Uniting these characters is Henry Carr, a minor British bureaucrat who recalls events in Zurich in which they all participated during the Great War. His age-frazzled memory gives impetus to a medley of forms and styles of poetry, prose, music and theater. Directed by Jean Cutler. For reservations: 686-4191.

"Dracula" $2.50, $3.50 and $4.50, 50 cent discount for students and senior citizens. 8 p.m. Oregon Repertory Theatre, Atrium Building. This version of the archetypal horror story was written by Crane Johnson. Included are castles, curses, the undead and assorted gothic goodies. Directed by Allan Gross. For reservations: 485-1946.

"Night Watch" $3. 8:15 p.m. Very Little Theatre, 24th and Hilyard. The play, a psychological murder mystery written by Lucille Fletcher, concerns a rather high-strung woman who insists she has seen a murdered man. No body is found and several close acquaintances, including her husband and a house guest, suggest she may be imagining things. But is she? Directed by Judi Johnson. For Reservations: 344-7751.
