

Assertiveness class set

The YWCA will sponsor a class in Assertiveness Training beginning Thursday, Oct. 19th, 7:00 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. The instructors are Sue Bettis and Marti Goodban. The course is for five consecutive weeks.

Participants in this five-week course will learn skills in assessing their communication strengths and weaknesses; adopting positive labels to encourage self-confidence; receiving and sending clearer messages in interactions; saying no to unfair requests and yes to personal goals; protecting their rights while affirming the rights of others; and choosing when not to assert oneself, and knowing why. The course will include readings, group discussion and roleplay.

The class is limited to 24 and the cost is $20 for members of the campus YWCA and $25 for non-members. For more information call 686-4439 Monday-Friday, 9:00-3:00 p.m. Advance registration is required.

Study in India offered

Graduate students in professional fields from throughout the United States have an opportunity to spend the 1979-80 academic year doing research, field work, or internships in India through a program coordinated by the University of California at Berkeley.

Students in the professional studies program are based at universities and institutes in India, and work with Indian faculty and professionals on projects related to their professional and research interests.

Past participants have investigated non-conventional energy resources, worked in an eye clinic, prepared an environmental impact study for a new urban development, and researched urban squatters, health systems, transportation systems, the Indian criminal code, library education, and the economic impact of multinational corporations.

In the process they have collected data for dissertations and gained invaluable field experience in their professions. Some of this research has been published in Indian and American journals.

Students are selected from graduate schools such as agriculture, business administration, architecture and planning, engineering, librarianship, public health, optometry, public policy, law, education, and medicine.

The program has an office and staff in New Delhi to assist the participants. Intensive language training and seminars on Indian civilization and development are offered.

January 15, 1979, is the deadline for applying to the program. For application information, write to International Education, University of California, 2538 Channing Way, Bldg. D., Berkeley, CA 94720

University students ready health faire

"Live for the Health of It," this year's edition of the annual health faire at the University, will be held this year in conjunction with the conference of the Oregon Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The faire, organized and presented by University students, will be held on campus Friday in Room 167 of the Erb Memorial Union and on the Eugene Mall near Centre Court Saturday (October 14). Both days the faire will be open to the public.

This year's faire is sponsored by the UO Health Department and the Eugene Downtown Association.

Additionally, talks by two athletic coaches and a session on orienteering will highlight the 61st annual conference of the Oregon Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation.

The public is invited to one of the talks, "The Future of the Olympic Games," to be given at 9 a.m. Saturday in the Forum Room of the Erb Memorial Union. Speaking will be LeRoy T. Walker head coach of the U.S. track and field team in the 1976 Olympic Games in Montreal. Walker is vice chancellor for university relations at North Carolina Central University.

Also keynoting the conference is George Raveling head basketball coach at Washington State University, whose talk is entitled "Johnny, Won't You Please Come Back?"

Walker's talk at 9 a.m. Saturday is open to the public at no charge. Registration for the rest of the conference is open to the public as well as to association members. Pre-registration may be made by telephoning conference manager Kelly Rankin at the UO, 686-3386. Registration also may be made in Room B-50 of the Gerlinger Hall Annex Thursday (Oct. 12) from 4 to 8 p.m. and Friday from 7 a.m. to 4 p.m.
