

Family workshop offered

The Community Center for Family Counseling, more commonly known as "Saturday Circus," is offering workshops throughout the county for parents interested in improving their children's behavior.

Parents and others have an opportunity to attend lectures and family counseling demonstrations, and to participate in counseling sessions and parents' study groups. Supervised playroom facilities are available.

In addition to the weekly sessions from 9 a.m. to noon on Saturday at Condon Elementary School, other sessions are open throughout the county.

For more information on any of the sessions, call the Counseling Center at Lane Community College, 747-4501.

Listings deadline extended

The deadline for accepting listings for the Women's Yellow Pages for Eugene and Lane County has been extended to November 15. The directory will include women-owned businesses, professional and para-professional women, women with skills and talents to share, and organizations who provide services for women.

The project is sponsored by Women Working, an organization formed to support and encourage women in business.

For further information, contact Grace Girsch, information coordinator and Diane Moore at 687-5443, and Lisa Joslen at 747-6369.

Study for new joggers scheduled

"New Joggers" are needed for a study that begins next week on health-related habit changes in people who have recently begun a running program. Participants must be over 25, have run less than six months with plans to continue for the next six months.

Participants will be given a "health-risk assessment," says Cindy Paxton, Health Education doctoral student.

Pre-testing will take 30-40 minutes during the next two weeks, and post-testing will take place in June, she says. Contact Cindy Paxton at 686-4132 for more information.
