Xmas tree permits sold

Persons wishing to choose and cut their own Christmas tree may purchase permits from the Willamette National Forest.

Permits will sell for $2 for each tree. Most districts have a limited number of permits, which will be sold on a first-come, first-served basis. The forest sells about 9,000 permits each year.

Personnel will be on duty to sell permits and direct people to the cutting areas weekdays and the first three weekends in December.

The forest's 24-hour information line, 687-6561, will contain current information on the permits.

Coffee Day to benefit handicapped

Friday is Coffee Day and restaurants, lounges and taverns across the state will pour free coffee on Friday to assist Oregon's handicapped. Waitresses from participating businesses will sell $1 "Brace-A-Child" buttons through Friday, and all button wearers will be entitled to free coffee.

Proceeds from the eighth annual Coffee Day fund raising drive will benefit the Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children and Adults of Oregon. More than 90 percent of the money contributed will remain in Oregon to provide direct services including a summer camp program, the Easter Seal School and Treatment Center in Eugene, an equipment loan pool, physical therapy programs and additional rehabilitation services.
