

Musical study breaks to kick off finals week

A free informal concert of early music including a group of medieval carols will be performed by the University Collegium Musicum in the Throne Room of the Museum of Art at 3:30 p.m. Friday.

The Collegium is a group of musicians devoted to the performance of early music for voices and instruments such as recorders, baroque flutes, harp, harpsichord, lute and medieval hand bells. The program will also include instrumental music by Italian and French masters of the 17th and 18th centuries and excerpts from a mass by Palestrina. The performance is under the direction of Prof. Hal Owen.

Take a relaxing break from Dead week. At 3:30 p.m. the Musica Antiqua will present an hour of medieval and renaissance song in room 307 Chapman.

The Musica Antiqua, a local group organized under the direction of Terry Ross, specializes in medieval, renaissance, and baroque music.

The University's Vocal Jazz Ensemble will present a concert with the University's Jazz Lab Band II at 8 p.m. tonight in Beall Hall.

The 28-member vocal group will perform nearly a dozen songs, including "Song for the Asking," "Isn't it Romantic," "Climbin' Higher Mountains" and "Avenue C." Music instructor Glenn Patton directs the group.

The jazz band will perform several improvisational pieces.

A free public concert scheduled Sunday at Beall Hall has been cancelled. It was to have featured the Eugene-based rock group Mithrandir and solo performer John Powell.

Workshop set on environment

There will be a legislative skills workshop Saturday at University Center at Salem's Willamette University.

The full day program includes workshops on wildlife, energy, transportation, water quality, appropriate technology, land use planning, and solid waste.

The workshop was organized to teach basic lobbying skills and to review and examine the environmentalist strategy for the upcoming Legislature.

The workshop costs $3. For more information call the Survival Center.

Architect to give speech

British architect James Stirling will give the keynote address at the Conference of Oregon Architects at the University of Oregon today and Saturday.

Stirling will lecture on his work at 8:30 p.m. tonight in the EMU Ballroom Lawrence Hall. Stirling has a private practice and is a professor of architecture at Yale University.

Highlighting the Saturday program will be a talk by Charles Rusch, new architecture department head.

Conference registration opens at 10 a.m. today in the Lawrence Hall Lobby. A business meeting of the Oregon Council of Architects, one of the conference sponsors, will be held at 10:30 a.m. Today's schedule also includes reviews of student projects; seminars in construction management, energy, site planning and value management; and a dinner in the Erb Memorial Union, after which Stirling will speak.

The conference is co-sponsored by the UO Department of Architecture.

Basic registration fee is $25. Complete information is available from Donald Micken of Eugene telephone 343-1990 (evenings).

Islamic students join fast

Islamic students will begin a three day hunger strike today at major centers in Eugene, Portland and Seattle. The fast is an effort to "spiritually join brothers and sisters in Iran as they struggle to depose Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi," a brochure states.

At noon today at 1246 Villard Street the strike participants will begin their fast with prayer. They will then proceed to the Wesley Center at 1236 Kincaid, where they will stay for the next three days and will be available for questions.

Interested students may phone 344-4219. All are urged by the fasters to join the strike by fasting for one meal over the weekend.
