

Court order halts Laetrile doses in leukemia therapy

PLYMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — The parents of 3-year-old Chad Green, the focus of a court battle over cancer therapy, were ordered Tuesday to stop giving him Laetrile and large doses of vitamins to treat his leukemia.

Judge Guy Volterra issued the order in Plymouth Superior Court. Six months ago, he had put the boy in the control of the state because the parents refused to give him chemotherapy to treat his cancer.

Last Friday, he ended two weeks of hearings on a request by Chad's parents, Diana and Gerald Green of Scituate, to resume custody of their son.

At those hearings, state officials contended Chad suffers from cyanide poisoning caused by the Laetrile and vitamin A poisoning brought on by high doses of the vitamin.

Lawyers for the parents of the small, blond child, whose disease is in remission, said they will appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court, if necessary, to overturn the order.

On Tuesday the judge said Chad must remain in the legal custody of the state, even though he can live with his parents.

making the news

From Associated Press Reports

WASHINGTON — Pres. Carter asked Congress Tuesday night to help him build "a new foundation" for prosperity at home and peace abroad, dismissing as myths the notions that America's only choices are between inflation and recession, confrontation and surrender.

In a State of the Union address that marked the midway point of his four-year term, Carter ventured no dramatic new proposals, but bid for enactment of those he already has outlined.

In the nationally broadcast and televised address at the Capitol, Carter presented these legislative proposals:

- A ceiling on hospital price increases, which he called a clear test of congressional commitment to fight inflation.
- A measure preparing for national health insurance, to be phased in during the 1980s.
- Limited public financing of congressional election campaigns.
- Deregulation of the trucking and rail industries.

Carter said inflation can be conquered without triggering recession or throwing people out of work.

TEL AVIV, Israel — Palestinian gunners shelled Israeli villages from bases in southern Lebanon again Tuesday and Israel answered with an artillery barrage and a warning that Lebanon will suffer more than Israel if the shooting continues along the volatile border.

Many Israelis living along the 69-mile frontier spent the day in bomb shelters.

A school in Kiryat Shmona took a direct hit from a Katyusha rocket moments after 400 pupils and their teachers descended into shelters.

TEHRAN — Iranian military leaders marched the elite imperial guard Tuesday in a bristling, goose-stepping show of loyalty. They boasted the troops were ready to "shed their blood" to support the monarchy and the government of Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar.

One of the chief aides to religious opposition leader Ayatollah Khomeini, meanwhile, warned that unless Bakhtiar resigns in favor of the ayatullah's planned Islamic republic, strikes will continue to cripple the nation's oil-based economy. Khomeini is expected to return Friday from Paris after 15 years in exile.

WASHINGTON — A Cabinet-level committee barred the Tennessee Valley Authority from completing the $119 million Tellico Dam in Tennessee, ruling that possible benefits from the project did not justify killing off the snail darter.

At the same time, the Endangered Species Committee voted to permit completion of the $1.6 billion Grayrocks Dam and Reservoir in Wyoming, provided protective measures are taken to ensure the project does not imperil whooping cranes.

Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus, chairman of the panel, said the unanimous decisions prove the committee can resolve conflicts between the law protecting endangered species and the public's need for government projects.

BANGKOK, Thailand — Vietnam said Tuesday that the "people's uprising" that toppled the Cambodian government of Premier Pol Pot was complete and "irreversible." But Thai and Western intelligence officials said fighting was continuing, some near Phenom Penh, the capital.

Vietnam's army newspaper, Quan Doi Nhan Dan, said China, which supports the Pol Pot government, was trying to sabotage the Cambodian revolution and that "a psychological campaign is being whipped up by Peking to distort" the situation.
