

Ayatullah postpones return to Iran

TEHRAN, Iran (AP)—Self-exiled religious leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has agreed to delay his return to Iran for three weeks at the request of Prime Minister Shah-pour Bakhtiar, a government source said Thursday.

Khomeini had planned to end his 14-year exile and return to Tehran from Paris Friday to begin efforts to replace the Bakhtiar government with an Islamic republic, his aides in France said Wednesday.

The government source, who asked not to be identified, said there need for special security for Khomeini's arrival and protection in Iran led Bakhtiar to suggest that he delay his arrival for at least three weeks.

The source said several million Iranians could be expected to greet Khomeini, who led the uprising that drove the shah from the country, upon his arrival in Tehran. "The crowd alone would have been too dangerous and too difficult to handle," he said.

Earlier in the day Wednesday,

Gen. Mehdi Rihimi, the military governor of Tehran, made no mention of Khomeini in an announcement that all of the nation's airports were being closed. The military had closed the Tehran airport for several hours Wednesday.

In Tehran, demonstrations erupted for and against the Bakhtiar government. Hundreds of pro-Khomeini demonstrators and about 1,000 Bakhtiar backers hurled stones at each other near the U.S. Embassy.

In Marrakech, the shah and his wife Empress Farah posed for photographers for 15 minutes in their first public appearance since they arrived in Morocco from Aswan, Egypt, two days ago. The shah appeared ill at ease, and reporters were not allowed to ask questions. Sources close to the shah said he has indefinitely postponed his planned visit to the United States, and was considering remaining in Morocco until the situation in Iran cleared.
