Assembly set to consider single motion

A single motion is up for University Assembly action when it meets today at 3:30 p.m. in 150 Geology.

English Prof. Derry Malsch's motion asks that Linguistics 151 be included among courses which fulfill Arts and Letters group requirements.

Also, the motion asks that Linguistics 311 now meet Social Science group requirements.

Malsch's motion was approved last week by the University Senate with 28 members voting in favor of the motion, none opposed and four abstentions.

Other matters to be reviewed by the Assembly include a list of winter term graduates and the results of a special election held to fill a vacancy on the graduate council.

English Prof. Clarence Thurber's motion concerning a proposed international studies program has been removed from the agenda at his request. It has not yet been rescheduled.

GTF fellowships offered

A pair of $500 graduate teaching fellowship awards have been established by Mortarboard, a University honor society, and the University Graduate School.

The awards will be given to the two GTFs judged to have made the greatest contribution to the educational process through teaching.

University faculty, graduate and undergraduate students may nominate one or more candidates for the award. Nominations should be placed in the Graduate School on or before April 16.

Awards winners will be officially recognized at the University's June commencement.

Time schedules available

Copies of the spring term Time Schedule of Classes are now available from the Office of the Registrar, 220 Oregon Hall. Supply is limited to one per person. The Office of the Registrar will mail time schedules if requests include $1.20 for postage and a 9 x 12 return envelope.
