

Smoking program open

Smokers who want to quit can get help at the University through the Oregon Smoking Control Program, which currently has openings.

The program, housed in the University Psychology Clinic in Straub Hall is now offering group treatment for smokers of cigarettes moderate to high in nicotine.

Cost of the treatment is $15 for all group programs. In addition, clients pay a refundable deposit of $15.

Appointments and complete information may be obtained by calling the program office at 686-4903.

SUAB to meet today

The Student University Affairs Board (SUAB) meets today at 3:30 p.m. in 337 EMU. Items on the agenda include SUAB member AnaMaria Bell's alleged non-fulfillment of duty, the "kill clause," which will be presented at the University Senate meeting next week, and discussion of mandatory course guides.

The kill clause allows the University Senate to vote out student's voting privileges in the assembly.

All students are welcome to attend.

Nigerian Night scheduled

The University's Nigerian Student Association and Foreign Students Association will co-sponsor a Nigerian Cultural Night Sunday at 6 p.m. in the EMU Ballroom.

The event will feature speeches on cultural and other developments in Nigeria, food, a variety of exhibitions, music and other forms of entertainment.

Tickets, which are available at the EMU Main Desk or at the door, are $2 for students and $3 for the general public. Children will be admitted free of charge.

Center taking job applications for next year

Are you interested in working more closely with environmental issues next year?

The Survival Center is now accepting applications for its seven staff positions for the 1979-80 school year. Positions include: director, three assistant directors, legislative coordinator, project intercept coordinator, and office manager.

Applications for director will be taken until 5 p.m. Friday, and applications for all other positions will be taken until April 27.

S. Africans act tonight

Four South African actors will present "Survival," tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the Community Center for the Performing Arts, 291 West 8th Ave.

"The play is from the Black South African's point of view," says Bruce Bowers, People for South African Freedom representative.

"Survival" was performed at the University two years ago, Bowers says, but many people thought it was sympathetic to apartheid and did not attend.

Fana Kekana, Themba Ntinga, Selaelo Maredi and Seth Sibanda are the cast and co-writers of "Survival."

Corrections, amplifications

A cash award of $1,000 for winners of a public service campaign contest was given to the University School of Journalism, not to the individuals named in Tuesday's Emerald.

Oregon State University cut funding for OSPIRG last year from $20,000 to $5,000, not $20 to $5, as the Emerald reported Tuesday.
