Getting their feet off the ground

Many men realize their creative energy by running around a track. It's the rare man who harnesses his creative energy for dance.

Riley Grannan is such a man. With his wife, Toni Pimble, Grannan performs and teaches ballet. The couple's goal is to make ballet an integral part of many Eugenean's lives.

"Dancers don't have to be perfectionists," says Grannan. "But they do need to be dedicated, striving for something."

For the story of Grannan's and Pimble's dedication to their art, please turn to Page 4B.
