Voter's Guide for the Bookstore's Board of Directors

Student-at-large One position for two year term

Ensel Yamada

All students in one way or another have some involvement with the University Bookstore, therefore the bookstore should be responsive to the needs of the students. My job, if elected, would be to help the bookstore with its responsiveness to the students. Hopefully my experience with other businesses will help me accomplish this.

Personally I have an interest in getting to know the workings of the bookstore. The bookstore is unlike any other business as it is student owned and run. I find this opportunity to help run this business an especially intriguing one.

The University of Oregon Bookstore is a nonprofit student oriented corporation. Its purpose is to meet student needs at the lowest possible cost to students. Last year, this supposedly nonprofit organization profited approximately $83,000.

As representative of the students, it is the Board of Directors' responsibility to see that these profits are returned to the students. I believe one of the most direct ways to accomplish this is to increase discounts on Bookstore products, such as textbooks and other school supplies.

Being a full-time student and an employee of the Bookstore, I have developed a well-rounded understanding of how this organization functions. I would greatly appreciate your vote this week.

Graduate Student Two positions: one to serve a one year term and one to serve a two year term.

The Bookstore thus far has shown itself to be by far the most progressive business in the college community. Besides providing efficient services and some lowered costs, it was quick to act in divesting itself of any connection to South African investments. This should be continued.

Besides the usual rhetoric about improving efficiency, lowering costs, etc., what I would like to see are:

- a review of the hiring policy and greater efforts in Affirmative Action hirings, particularly with respect to minority and foreign students. Presently there are only two minorities of a total 80 employees. This is particularly important in that visa restrictions and other constraints leave only the bookstore and the EMU cafeteria as the main potential employers of foreign students. Since Gov. Atiyeh is working to make financing even more difficult for those people bringing different cultures to the campus, the issue is of major concern.

- a creation of a bookstore fund to aid community area groups that have no ongoing income stream yet provide a valuable service to the community.

- increasing the participation of employees in the determination of Bookstore policy and priorities.

Every student at this university spends on an average between $50 and $100 a term on text books. The continued discount of these books, currently 11%, is an issue I'm very concerned about. Keeping costs down for students in all areas of the bookstore is something I want to continually pursue.

The University of Oregon Bookstore, Inc. is a non-profit organization formed to serve the students and faculty of this university. It's very important that this corporation receive good, knowledgeable management in order to keep its prices as low as possible while still keeping the bookstore financially solvent.

As a business major, concentrating on marketing, I feel I have considerable management skills and the abilities to work with the board of directors in keeping student costs at a minimum. I feel I can obtain good corporate experience and add to the board an opinion representative of student needs. Because prices affect us all, I ask that you vote May 9, 10 and 11 in the bookstore general elections.

One of the main issues facing the University of Oregon Bookstore is the problem of how to reduce the costs of textbooks to the student body. Currently, the Bookstore gives students an 11% discount on textbooks.

I feel that one solution to this problem would be to make use of the Bookstore's current excess profits by extending the student discount rate even further. Although the Bookstore needs a certain amount of profit to act as working capital, I think it would be in the best interest to a minimum in order to extend the student discount rate on textbooks.

I feel that the qualifications necessary to handle the problems faced by the bookstore include having previous retail experience and a strong academic knowledge of business and accounting. I believe I meet these qualifications by having worked as an assistant manager of a retail clothing store and by earning a 3.5 in my business courses.

I would like to underscore the importance of the students' input into the policy decisions made by the board that are handed down to the students in the form of keeping textbook price increases to a minimum, increasing service and convenience and continually searching for ways to keep the bookstore from being out of reach of the students. In addition to these issues I would also favor increased student input into the board's decisions and would work toward this goal in a serious and responsible manner. Student polls at the bookstore during the first week of school are an obvious method of obtaining this increased input.

I have gone through many of the same hassles involved in university life as everyone else. However, as chairman of the Student University Affairs Board this past year, I have had an excellent opportunity to gain experience in student representation, in addition to obtaining very comprehensive knowledge of the sometimes complex workings of this University. In addition I have had the advantageous opportunity of serving as an ASUO representative to the Board of Directors of the Oregon Daily Emerald.

Once again I would like to encourage students to vote for responsible representatives at your bookstore.

Andy Vandermolen

We need more consumer orientated people on the Bookstore Board of Directors. I feel our nonprofit Bookstore should not have shown the $100,000 annual profit it has shown for each of the last four years. We can reduce this excess profit by: 1. paying students more for used books, 2. lowering the profit margin on supplies, 3. increasing the textbook discount. These moves would return the excess profit back to the students.

As most students know this year the Bookstore divested its holdings in companies supporting the government of South Africa. What many students do not know is that the Bookstore has accounts with the U.S. National Bank of Oregon, a bank that owns shares in the funding corporation that makes loans to the South African government. I believe the Bookstore should move its accounts to another bank until U.S. National sells its South African stock.

The Bookstore is for the students. As a member of the Board of Directors, my priorities would be to move the Bookstore bank accounts and see that excess profits are returned to the student.
