

Term paper help offered

The University library is offering students help in writing term papers through June 1.

The term-paper service is as simple as telling the librarian at the first-floor desk near the card catalog that you want to get started and what your topic is.

An appointment with a librarian will be scheduled for a half-hour consultation at which time you can ask questions, and discuss your topic in some detail.

For more information on the term paper service call the library at 686-3053.

Evaluations

"You don't achieve success if you are easily discouraged," he says. "As long as students are concerned with the issues we're going to go back to the state board and the Legislature until we get what we need."

Publication doesn't seem to be much of an issue with the three lobbyists.

"There's nothing in the bill that prohibits publishing if someone wants to go to all that trouble," says Jennings.

"As far as I know, the ASUO is not going to print the results on any level, adds Warren.

Bernau predicts that the individual universities will release the results for publication after seeing how students use the data.

"They will realize that it (release of evaluations results) isn't as scary as they thought it would be," he says.

Dear Mom,

Happy Mother's Day. Thanks for being there whenever we needed you. Caring for us, sharing our ups and downs. Because we love you so, we're taking you to The Branding Iron to celebrate your day. As you know, their regular menu is great but, this Sunday, they're also serving an old fashioned fresh roasted Oregon Tom Turkey dinner with all the trimmings, including home-made soup or salad, dressing, potatoes, giblet gravy, vegetable, cranberry sauce and fresh strawberry shortcake. And it's only $6.95 for grown-ups and $4.95 for us kids. The Branding Iron is going to open at 4 p.m. on Mother's Day so let's get there early. Remember, it's at 579 East Broadway in Eugene and their phone number is 344-3401.

We Love You, Mom!
