

Farmers' market planned

The Amazon Community Tenants (ACT) and the University Food-Op will co-sponsor a farmers' market Saturday at Amazon Student Housing on the corner of 22nd Avenue and Patterson Street. The market will begin at 8 a.m. and run until 1 p.m. on the Patterson Street side of the housing.

Fresh local produce will be featured, including potatoes, green peppers, zucchini squash, carrots and other vegetables. Some out-of-state produce, including fruit, will also be sold.

Community ed workshop set

A conference for community college and community school personnel will be held next week, Sunday through Friday, at the University.

Key speakers will be Dr. Amo de Bernardis, president of Portland Community College and Dr. Suzanne Fletcher, director of the Center for Community Education in Washington, D.C.

Graduate credit is available for attending the conference and doing some additional coursework. Credit is offered on a pass/no pass basis.

For more information, contact either Ralph Rands at CEPM, 686-5064 or Larry Warford at LCC, 747-4501.

Solar booklets available

The University's Solar Energy Center is offering several books and pamphlets to people interested in learning how to calculate solar energy levels or evaluate heat losses from their homes.

"The best way for an individual to learn about solar energy is to start right from the beginning," says John Reynolds, University architecture professor and center director. "We have two or three publications that offer an introduction to the application of solar energy."

According to Reynolds, there are eight booklets available and a list showing the title, description and cost of each may be ordered from the center at no charge. The booklets, written by University faculty and students, range in price from 75 cents to $5.

One of the introductory booklets, "Pacific Northwest Solar Buildings," costs $5 and presents photos, plans and sections of 65 solar buildings in the Northwest.

Another, "Solar Guide and Calculator," costs $3 and provides an introduction to how the sun can be collected as energy and shows how to calculate different levels of solar intensity.

Reynolds suggests that individuals, after reviewing the list of booklets, may examine copies of the booklets at the Architecture and Allied Arts library before ordering them from the center. The library is located in 227 Lawrence.

For a free booklet list, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to The Center for Environmental Research, School of Architecture and Allied Arts, University of Oregon, Eugene, Ore. 97403.

Cedar firewood offered

Free cedar firewood is available to anyone with the vehicle to travel to the coast and pick it up.

According to Mapleton District Ranger Melvin Kessel, the site will be open Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. for firewood collection. No permit will be required and a Forest Service employee will be available to direct people to the site. The wood is waste material which has been cut into two-foot lengths; saws will not be needed.

The site is about nine miles from Florence and can be reached by going south from Florence on Highway 101 to Honeyman State Park, then a left turn on County Road 5310 (Canary Road); travel about seven miles to Forest Service Road 4830 (Popo Road) and then about two miles to where the Forest Service employee will be directing firewood gatherers into the area.
