Student loans increase

The number of student loans granted from two major loan funds at the University increased 10.6 percent during the 1978-79 fiscal year, according to a report released this month by the Office of Business Affairs.

The default rate on the NDSL loans continues to be reduced, Larry Tergesen, University administrative loan officer, states in the introduction to the report.

"Although defaults and delinquencies are not stated in the loan report, we are pleased to report that there is a continuing reduction in the default rate as the principal balance of defaulted loans at June 30, 1979, was $1,751,810.72 compared to $2,045,991 as of June 30, 1978, and $2,211,941 as of June 30, 1977," Tergesen said.

The reduction was accomplished despite an increase in the dollar amount of loans outstanding, he said. Loans worth $12,361,104 were outstanding as of June 30, 1979, compared to $9,598,872 a year earlier.
